Z

Z, z (zē; in British usage, in America sometimes, called zĕd; formerly also ĭz′ĕrd), n.; pl. Z′s, z′s, Zs, zs (zēz). 1. The twenty-sixth and last letter of the English alphabet. It comes from the Latin, which borrowed it, after the Roman conquest, from the Greek zeta and used it to render that letter in words from the Greek. The Greek letter is of Semitic origin (Hebrew zayin). In English, z represents a voiced fricative consonant, the sonant correlative of s, but its sound is more often represented by s than by z. It sometimes has the palatalized sound of z in azure. See Pron., §§ 265–268. The letter z occurs for Middle English ȝ, with the sound of y (see Y), in a few Scottish names and words, as gaberlunzie, capercailzie (cf. CAPERCAILLIE). English z occurs in some native words, as graze, ooze, to represent the voiced sound of an earlier written s (see S), but for the most part it is restricted to loan words, especially from the Greek. See ALPHABET; cf. IZZARD.

2. a An instance of the letter Z, z, printed, written, painted, etc. b A printer's type, a stamp, etc., for the letter Z, z. c The sound, or any sound, of the letter Z. d [cap.] In medieval Roman numerals, 2,000 or, in the form Z, 2,000,000.

3. [usually cap.] Anything having the shape of the letter Z.

4. As a symbol, used to denote or indicate: a Anyone or anything arbitrarily or conveniently so designated, esp. as the twenty-fifth or (cf. K, n., 4) twenty-sixth, or, when V and W are not used, the twenty-third in order or class. b Math. An unknown quantity (which see). c A buzzing sound; — usually in the form zz, z-z, zzz, etc.

5. As an abbreviation: see Abbreviations, in Appendix.

— from A to Z. From beginning to end; thoroughly.

Z, z, adj. 1. Twenty-fifth or (cf. K, adj., 1) twenty-sixth or (cf. Z, n., 4) twenty-third in order or class.

2. [cap.] Having the form of capital Z; as, a Z bar.

'z- or z-. A contraction for God's in combinations used as oaths; as, 'zblood.

ze'ro (zē'rō; 116), n.; pl. ZEROS, ZEROES (-ōz). [F. zéro, fr. It. zero, fr. Ar. ṣifr empty, a cipher. Cf. CIPHER.] 1. Arith. A cipher; the number corresponding to the metaphysical nothing or naught; strictly, the number (0) defined by the equations $a + 0 = a$, $a.0 = 0$; a constant less than any assignable magnitude or quantity; nothing.

2. The origin or point of departure in reckoning; specif. the point from which the graduation of a scale, as of a thermometer, commences. Zero, in the centigrade, or Celsius, and Reaumur thermometers, is at the point at which water congeals. In the Fahrenheit thermometer it was originally fixed at the point at which the mercury stands when immersed in a mixture of snow and common salt. In Wedgwood's scale the zero corresponds with 1077° on the Fahrenheit scale. See TEMPERATURE; THERMOMETER, Illust.

3. Figuratively, the lowest point; nothingness; nullity; as, his patience had nearly reached zero.

4. Anything bearing the number represented by a cipher, as the space numbered 0 at roulette.

5. Mil. = ZERO HOUR.

zero ablaut grade. = ZERO GRADE.

zeu'ner·ite (zoi'nĕr·īt), n. [After G. Zeuner of Freiberg.] Mineral. A hydrous copper uranium arsenate in tabular crystals. Sp. gr., 3.2.

Zeus (zūs; zōōs), n. [Gr. (gen. Dios); akin to L. Jupiter, Skr. Dyaus, OHG. Zīo, ON. Týr, AS. Tīw. An ancient deification of the shining sky; in Teut. a god of war. See DEITY; cf. DYAUS, JUPITER, TUESDAY.] Gr. Relig. The chief of the Olympian gods, "father of gods and men"; — identified by the Romans with Jupiter. (1) The most primitive character of Zeus is probably as god of the elements, as rain, wind, thunder, and lightning; the thunderbolt is his sign, the rainbow, Iris, his messenger. He is especially connected with lofty mountains and has his seat upon Olympus, whence he is Zeus O·lym'pi·us (ō·lĭm'pĭ·ŭs). (2) He is also giver of victory in war and in athletic contests, whence the aegis is his attribute and Nike (victory) his attendant. Hence he is called "Aegis-bearing," "Victory-bringing," and Zeus So'ter (sō'tĕr), "Zeus, the Savior." The great Olympian and Nemean games were held in his honor. (3) Further, Zeus is the god of moral law and order, protector of suppliants and punisher of guilt. He is here the consort of Themis and the source of divine decrees, speaking through oracles, of which that at Dodona was pre-eminent. (4) He is also god of social virtues: of friendship, Zeus Phil'i·os (fĭl'ĭ·ŏs); of hospitality, Zeus Xe'ni·os (zē'nĭ·ŏs) and Zeus Hi·ke'si·os (hĭ·kē'sĭ·ŏs); and, in a broader sense, of family and kindred ties. Zeus Her·ke'ios (hĕr·kē'yŏs; -kĭ'ŏs), Zeus Kte'si·os (k'tē'sĭ·ŏs), Zeus Te·le'ios (tē·lē'yŏs; -lĭ'ŏs). (5) As a political deity, he is the head of the clan or phratry, Zeus Phra'tri·os (frā'trĭ·ŏs); of the state, Zeus Bas'i·leus' (băs'ĭ·lūs') and Zeus Pol'i·eus' (pŏl'ĭ·ūs') (cf. DI'I·PO'LI·A (dĭ'ĭ·pō'lĭ·ä)); of council, Zeus Bou·la'ios (bōō·lā'yŏs; -lĭ'ŏs); of assemblies and trials, Zeus Ag'o·ra'ios (ăg'ō·rā'yŏs; -rĭ'ŏs); of good faith, Zeus Pis'ti·os (pĭs'tĭ·ŏs) (cf. FIDES). (6) As the supreme deity of the whole Hellenic race, of Greece as a nation, he is called Zeus Hel·le'ni·os (hĕ·lē'nĭ·ŏs) or Pan'hel·le'ni·os (păn'hĕ·lē'nĭ·ŏs) and, in commemoration of the victory which preserved the race from Persian subjugation, Zeus El'eu·the'ri·os (ĕl'ū·thē'rĭ·ŏs) (cf. ELEUTHERIA). (7) He was also regarded in some aspects as a chthonian, or underworld, god, and was hence called Zeus Ha'des (hā'dēz) and Zeus Mei·li'chi·os (mī·lĭk'ĭ·ŏs) (probably a euphemism; cf. DIASIA). (8) Finally, in later Greek thought, and esp. in Orphic mysticism, Zeus was viewed as a supreme, perhaps pantheistic, deity, the beginning and end of all things.

Zeus, with Attributes: Nike and Crown, Thunderbolt, and Eagle.

Zeus was regarded by the Greeks as a god of the Hellenic race, the original seat of whose worship was Thessaly. The myths of his overthrowing Cronus and of his conquest of the Titans and Giants have been interpreted as legendary accounts of his replacing of earlier deities, while many of his cult epithets indicate amalgamation with older local deities (as Zeus Ly·ce'ius (lĭ·sē'yŭs) or Ly·cae'us (lĭ·sē'ŭs) worshiped in the Peloponnesus probably with human sacrifice) or Zeus Am'mon (ăm'ŏn), worshiped in Libya. Zeus is represented as the son of Cronus and Rhea and as the consort, generally, of Hera, by whom he was father of Ares, Hebe, and Hephaestus; though also of Leto, who bore to him Apollo and Artemis; of Demeter, who bore Persephone; of Dione, who bore Aphrodite; of Maia, who bore Hermes; of Semele, who bore Dionysus; of Alcmene, mother of Hercules, Mnemosyne, mother of the Muses, and Eurynome, mother of the Graces. See JUPITER, etc.

zi·mar'ra (zĭ·mär'ä), n. [It. See SIMAR.] R.C.Ch. The house or street soutane worn by prelates and priests; a cloak; — sometimes called simar. Cf. CHIMER.

zimb (zĭmb; zĭm), n. [Amharic zĭnb fly.] A large two-winged fly, native of Abyssinia, probably of the family Tabanidae.

zim·ba'bwe (zĭm·bä'bwā), n. [Pg., fr. Bantu (Southern Rhodesia) zimba, pl. of imba house + mabg(w)e stones.] The chief kraal or residence of a native chieftain, esp. in southeastern Africa before the coming of Europeans; hence, the ruins of any early stone kraal, fort, or other building; specif. [cap.], the Great Zimbabwe (see ZIMBABWE in Gaz.).

zim'ent·wa'ter (zĭm'ĕnt·wô'tĕr; zĭ·mĕnt'-), n. [G. zementwasser.] A kind of water found in copper mines; water impregnated with copper. Rare.

zim'me (zĭm'ē), n. [ME. zimme, fr. AS. gim(m), fr. L. gemma. See GEM.] A gem.

Zim'mer·wal'di·an (tsĭm'ĕr·väl'dĭ·ăn), n. A follower of the program adopted by the International Socialist Congress held at Zimmerwald, Switzerland, in 1916, which emphasized internationalism as a method of negativing war. — Zim'mer·wal'di·an, adj.

Ze'ror (zē'rôr). Bib.

Zim′mer·wald′ist (tsĭm′ĕr·väl′dĭst), n. A Zimmerwaldian.

zim′mi (zĭm′ē), n. Also zim′my. [Turk. dhimmi (pron. zimmi), fr. Ar. dhimmi.] One of another religion, esp. Christianity or Judaism, who pays tribute to the law under the protection of a Moslem government.

zim′mis (tsĭm′ĭs), n. [Yiddish ṣimmis, perh. fr. Heb. ṣamath.] Jewish. A dish of sweetened mixed vegetables.

zi·moc′ca (zĭ·mŏk′ä), n. Also zimocca sponge. A rather harsh commercial sponge (Euspongia zimocca) of a massive, more or less conical form, occurring in the Mediterranean Sea.

Zim′ri (zĭm′rī), n. 1. Bib. A king of Israel. 1 Kings xvi. 10. 2. In Dryden's Absalom and Achitophel, a name given to George Villiers, second Duke of Buckingham (1628–87), whom Dryden satirizes. See BAYES.

zinc (zĭngk), n. [G. zink, of unknown origin; cf. F. zinc, fr. G.] 1. Chem. A bluish-white crystalline metallic element, brittle when cold, malleable at 110–210° C. (230–410° F.), and brittle at 260° C. Symbol, Zn; at. no., 30; at. wt., 65.38. Zinc occurs abundantly, but probably never in the native state. Its chief ores are sphalerite or blende, smithsonite, and calamine. In New Jersey willemite and zincite are ores of zinc, and franklinite is used for making zinc oxide. The metal is obtained by distillation, by heating an intimate mixture of ore and carbon (blende must first be roasted; smithsonite and calamine are often first calcined). In the Belgian process the mixture is heated in tubular or cylindrical clay retorts in a furnace (Belgian furnace); in the Silesian process the distilling vessels are larger and muffle-shaped, and the furnace (Silesian furnace) is heated to a higher temperature. Some of the zinc vapor condenses to a bluish powder known as zinc dust, which contains several per cent of oxide, and is used chiefly as a reducing agent. The remainder of the zinc collects as a liquid and is cast into slabs. If melted zinc is poured slowly into water, it forms thin, brittle flakes of granulated, or mossy, zinc. Sp. gr. (of pure zinc), 7.14; weight of a cubic foot, 445 lbs. Zinc melts at 419.4° C. (787° F.) and boils at 907° C. It tarnishes only slightly in moist air at ordinary temperatures. At sufficiently high temperatures it burns in air with a brilliant bluish-green flame, forming the oxide. Commercial zinc, or pure zinc when in contact with almost any other metal, dissolves readily in dilute acids. Zinc is used to make roofing, sheathing, etc., to coat iron (see GALVANIZED IRON), to make alloys, as brass, in voltaic cells, etc. Zinc has a valence of two, and has acid properties as well as basic ones. See ZINCATE. Its salts are poisonous.
2. A piece of zinc for use in a voltaic cell.
3. Short for ZINC OXIDE, ZINC SULPHIDE, etc.
4. A color, bluish-red in hue, of very low saturation and high brilliance. It is bluer than dove gray. Called also cloud gray, gray dawn. Cf. COLOR.
5. Bookbinding. [pl.] Objects made wholly or partly of zinc, as metal fenders, etc.

☞ COMBINATIONS and PHRASES are:

zinc-coated	zinc fixer	zinc-roofed
zinc-etched	zinc-lined	zinc sampler

zinc, adj. Pertaining to or made of zinc; containing zinc.

zinc (zĭngk), v. t.; ZINCED or ZINCKED (zĭngkt); ZINC′ING or ZINCK′ING (zĭngk′ĭng). To treat or coat with zinc; galvanize.

zinc alkyl. Chem. Any of a class of organic zinc compounds of the general formula ZnR_2. They are typically colorless, mobile liquids which have a disagreeable odor and ignite readily in air. They are made usually by the action of an alkyl iodide (as ethyl iodide) on a zinc-sodium or zinc-copper alloy. Zinc alkyls are very reactive and hence have been much used in the synthesis of organic compounds. The simplest members are zinc methyl, or zinc methide, $Zn(CH_3)_2$, zinc ethyl, or zinc ethide, $Zn(C_2H_5)_2$, etc.

Zin′ca·lo (zĭng′kä·lō; tsĕng′kä·lō), n.; fem. ZINCALA (-lä); pl. ZINCALI (-lē). [Sp. Romany zincaló, fr. caló gypsy; cf. It. zingaro, G. zigeuner.] A gypsy of Spain.

zinc amide. Chem. A white amorphous compound, $Zn(NH_2)_2$, obtained by action of ammonia on zinc ethyl.

zinc′ate (zĭngk′āt), n. Chem. A salt of zinc hydroxide, $Zn(OH)_2$, in its capacity of a weak acid; as, sodium zincate, Na_2ZnO_2.

zinc blende. [After G. zinkblende.] Mineral. Sphalerite.

zinc bloom. [After G. zinkblumen flowers of zinc, zinc oxide.] Mineral. = HYDROZINCITE.

zinc bromide. Chem. A white, crystalline salt, $ZnBr_2$, very deliquescent and soluble.

zinc carbonate. Chem. A crystalline salt, $ZnCO_3$, occurring native as smithsonite; also, any of several artificially prepared basic carbonates of zinc, used in antiseptic dusting powders, in ointments, as pigments, etc.

zinc chloride. Chem. A white caustic salt, $ZnCl_2$, deliquescent and readily soluble, often found in commerce in cast sticks. It is used as a wood preservative, as a flux in soldering, as a caustic, as a disinfectant, astringent, etc.

zinc chrome. A lemon-yellow pigment consisting of zinc chromate, $ZnCrO_4$: — called also zinc yellow, citron yellow.

zinc crust. See PARKES PROCESS.

zinc dust. See ZINC, 1.

zinc engraving. = ZINCOGRAPHY.

zinc etching. Zincography; also, a zincograph.

zinc ethyl or zinc ethide. Chem. See ZINC ALKYL.

zinc flowers. = FLOWERS OF ZINC. See ZINC OXIDE.

zinc gray. a Zinc dust used as a pigment. b Now, usually, ground sphalerite (zinc blende) used as a pigment. c A mixture of zinc white with finely divided charcoal, or with lithopone, chalk, or other pigments.

zinc green. a = COBALT GREEN. b Any of various green pigments consisting of mixtures of zinc chrome and Prussian blue.

zinci-. Chem. A combining form denoting the presence of zinc.

zinc′ic (zĭngk′ĭk), adj. Chem. Pertaining to, containing, or like, zinc; zincous.

zinc′ide (-īd; -ĭd; 157), n. Also -id. A compound of zinc with an element or radical.

zinc·if′er·ous (zĭngk·ĭf′ĕr·ŭs; zĭn·sĭf′-), adj. [zinc + -ferous.] Containing or yielding zinc.

zinc′i·fy (zĭngk′ĭ·fī), v. t.; -FIED (-fīd); -FY′ING (-fī′ĭng). [zinc + -fy.] To coat or impregnate with zinc; to zinc; galvanize. — zinc′i·fi·ca′tion (-fĭ·kā′shŭn), n.

zinc′ite (zĭngk′īt), n. Mineral. 1. Native zinc oxide, ZnO, a brittle, deep-red to orange-yellow, hexagonal mineral usually occurring in massive or granular form; — called also red zinc ore, and red oxide of zinc. H., 4–4.5. Sp. gr., 5.43–5.7.
2. An ore of zinc. See ZINC, 1. U. S.

zinck′y (zĭngk′ĭ), adj. Also zink′y, zinc′y. Pertaining to or containing zinc, or having its appearance.

zinc methyl, or zinc methide. Chem. See ZINC ALKYL.

zinco-. A combining form from Latin zincum, zinc, as in zincography. — zin′co (zĭng′kō), adj.

zin′co·graph (zĭng′kō·grăf), n. A zinc plate prepared for printing by zincography; also, a print from such a plate.

zin·cog′ra·pher (zĭng·kŏg′rä·fĕr), n. Formerly, one who practiced zincography; a photoengraver, or lithographer.

zin·cog′ra·phy (-fĭ), n. [zinco- + -graphy.] The art or process of putting designs of any kind in the form of a printing surface on zinc plates, and of producing impressions therefrom; sometimes, a process in which a relief plate is made by etching away parts of the zinc; esp., a process the same in principle as lithography in which a zinc plate replaces the stone. — zin′co·graph′ic (zĭng′kō·grăf′ĭk), zin′co·graph′i·cal (-ĭ·kăl), adj.

zinc′oid (zĭngk′oid), adj. [zinc + -oid.] Pert. to or like zinc; — of the electricity of the zincous plate connected with a copper plate in a voltaic circle; also, noting the positive pole. Obs.

zinc ointment. Pharm. An ointment consisting of 20 per cent of zinc oxide mixed with a petrolatum or lard base, used in the treatment of skin diseases.

zin·col′y·sis (zĭng·kŏl′ĭ·sĭs), n. [NL., fr. zinco- + -lysis.] Electrolysis, esp. with a zinc anode. Obs.

zin′co·po′lar (zĭng′kō·pō′lĕr), adj. Elec. Of or pertaining to the zincous pole.

zinc orange. A color, red-yellow in hue, of high saturation and high brilliance; — called also cowslip. Cf. COLOR.

zinc′ous (zĭngk′ŭs), adj. Chem. a Of, pertaining to, containing, or like, zinc; zincic; as, zincous salts. b Hence, formerly, electropositive; basic.

zinc oxide. Chem. An infusible solid, ZnO, occurring native as zincite, and obtained as a light white powder (flowers of zinc, philosopher's wool, nihil album, etc.) when zinc is burned. Commercially it is produced chiefly by roasting zinc ores in air or by oxidizing the vapors of boiling zinc metal. It is used as a pigment (see ZINC WHITE), in compounding rubber (esp. for tires), in ointments, etc.

zinc pole. Elec. Of a voltaic cell, the negative pole.

zinc sender. Teleg. A sender, used on long lines, esp. submarine cables, which automatically sends a momentary reverse current into the circuit after every signal, to counteract retardation.

zinc spar. Smithsonite.

zinc spinel. Mineral. Gahnite.

zinc standard cell. Physical Chem. = CLARK CELL.

zinc sulphate. Chem. A salt, $ZnSO_4$, usually obtained by dissolving zinc in sulphuric acid, or by roasting and oxidizing certain zinc ores. It commonly forms colorless crystals containing seven molecules of water, and is then called also white vitriol, zinc vitriol and, when native, goslarite. It is used in dyeing, in making varnish, in medicine, etc.

zinc sulphide. Chem. The sulphide of zinc, ZnS, occurring naturally as sphalerite (or blende) and obtained artificially as a white amorphous precipitate. It is a constituent of certain white pigments, as lithopone. Zinc sulphide prepared in certain ways exhibits phosphorescence.

zin′cu·ret (zĭng′kū·rĕt), v. t. [See -URET.] Chem. To combine or impregnate with zinc.

zinc vitriol. See ZINC SULPHATE.

zinc white. Zinc oxide, used as a white pigment, esp. in house paints, water colors, enamels, and glazes. It is the whitest of all pigments and is permanent and nonpoisonous, but lacks opacity and dries slowly in oil to form a hard smooth surface which tends to scale. A mixture of white lead and zinc oxide forms a very satisfactory paint.

zinc yellow. 1. Zinc chrome prepared for use as a paint pigment.
2. The color light chrome yellow. See CHROME YELLOW.

zin′fan·del (zĭn′făn·dĕl), n. [Prob. from a place name in Europe.] A red or white dry California wine, containing about 10 or 11 per cent of alcohol by volume.

zing (zĭng), n. [Imitative.] a A shrill humming noise. b A sharp thrill. c Vim; energy; spirit; enthusiasm. — zing, v. i. — zing, interj. All Slang.

zin′ga·re′sca (tsĕng′gä·rā′skä), n. [It. Cf. ZINCALO.] Music. A gypsy song or dance; a composition in gypsy style.

‖zin′ga·ro (tsĕng′gä·rō), n. Also zin′ga·no (-nō). Fem. -RA (-rä), -NA (-nä); pl. -RI (-rē), -NI (-nē). [It. Cf. ZINCALO.] A gypsy.

zin′ger·one (zĭn′jĕr·ōn), n. [From ZINGIBER.] Chem. A colorless, crystalline, pungent ketone, $C_{11}H_{14}O_2$, obtained from ginger oil.

Zin′gi·ber (zĭn′jĭ·bĕr), n. [L., ginger.] Bot. a A genus of tropical Asiatic and Polynesian plants typifying the Zingiberaceae. They have tuberous rootstocks, leafy stems, and a conelike cluster of imbricated bracts, each bract enclosing from one to three flowers. Z. officinale is the common ginger; Z. cassumunar yields cassumunar; Z. zerumbet is thought to yield zerumbet. b [not cap.] Any plant of this genus.

Zin′gi·ber·a′ce·ae (-ā′sē·ē), n. pl. [NL.] Bot. A family of tropical monocotyledonous plants (order Musales) consisting of leafy perennial herbs with aromatic rootstocks and very irregular flowers having a single perfect stamen. There are 35 genera and about 800 species, including Zingiber, Curcuma, Hedychium, and Alpinia. — zin′gi·ber·a′ceous (-shŭs), adj.

zin′gi·ber·ene (zĭn′jĭ·bĕr·ēn), n. [Zingiber + -ene.] Chem. A liquid sesquiterpene, $C_{15}H_{24}$, the chief constituent of ginger oil.

zin′gi·ber·ol (-ōl; -ŏl), n. [Zingiber + 1st -ol.] Chem. A fragrant liquid alcohol, $C_{12}H_{20}O$, obtained from ginger oil.

zin′ken·ite (zĭng′kĕn·īt), n. [After J. K. L. Zinken, director of the Anhalt mines.] Mineral. Native lead thioantimonite, $PbSb_2S_4$, a steel-gray mineral of metallic luster, occurring in orthorhombic crystals and in masses. H., 3–3.5. Sp. gr., 5.30–5.35.

Zin′ni·a (zĭn′ĭ·ä), n. [NL., after J. G. Zinn (1727–59), professor of medicine at Göttingen.] Bot. a A small genus of tropical American herbs of the thistle family (Carduaceae), with very showy flowers. Z. elegans is the common garden zinnia and is the State flower of Indiana (see STATE FLOWER, Plate). Syn. Crassina. b [not cap.] A plant or flower of this genus.

zinn′wald·ite (tsĭn′vält·īt), n. [From Zinnwald, Bohemia.] Mineral. A pale-violet, yellow, brown, or dark-gray variety of mica containing iron and lithium.

zin′sang (zĭn′săng), n. [Error for linsang.] The delundung, or linsang.

Zin′zar (zĭn′zär), n. One of a people of Macedonia and northern Greece, speaking a language akin to the Rumanian.

Zi′on (zī′ŭn), n. [Heb. Tsiyōn, orig. the name of the Jebusite stronghold on the southern part of the eastern hill of Jerusalem, of uncert. origin.] 1. Jewish Antiq. A hill in Jerusalem, which, after the capture of that city by the Israelites, became the royal residence of David and his successors, the place of the temple, the center of Hebrew government, worship, and national life.
2. Hence: a The chosen people; the Israelites. b The theocracy, or church directly administered by God. c The heavenly city of God.

Zi′on·ism (-ĭz′m), n. [Zion + -ism.] Among the modern Jews, a theory, plan, or movement for colonizing their own race in Palestine, the land of Zion, either for religious or nationalizing purposes; — called also Zion movement. Impetus was given toward the practical realization of this end by a declaration of Lord Balfour (Nov. 2, 1917) that the British government favored a national home for the Jewish people in Palestine, without prejudice to the civil and religious rights of the existing non-Jewish communities. A Zionist Congress, held biennially in some European city, is the supreme authority in the movement. Since 1919 the actual rehabilitation of Palestine has been begun and much progress in actual settlement effected. — Zi′on·ist (-ĭst), n. & adj. — Zi′on·is′tic (-ĭs′tĭk), adj.

Zi′on·ite (-īt), n. [See ZION.] 1. A citizen of Zion; one of the chosen people of God.
2. = RONSDORFER.
3. One who favors Zionism; a Zionist.
4. A follower of John Alexander Dowie (1848–1907), founder of Zion City, Illinois, and of the Christian Catholic Church (which see).

Zi′on·ward (-wĕrd), adv. Toward Zion; heavenward.

zip (zĭp), n. [Imitative.] a A sudden sharp hissing or sibilant sound such as that made by a flying bullet. b Colloq. Energy; vim; snap; force; dash. — v. i. To make, or move with, a zip; also, Colloq., to be full of dash, life, sparkle, vim, or the like. — v. t. To impart speed or force to; also, Colloq., to give dash, vigor, or snap to; — often with up.

Zi′pa (sē′pä), n. [Chibcha.] The title of one of the two principal hereditary chiefs of the Chibchas. See CHIBCHA.

Zi·phi′i·dae (zĭ·fĭ′ĭ·dē), n. pl. [NL. See ZIPHIUS.] Zool. A family of whales related to the sperm whales but having the front of the head drawn out so as to suggest a beak and the teeth entirely wanting or reduced to one or two on each side of the lower jaw. They reach a length of from 12 to 30 feet. They are often included in the family Physeteridae as a subfamily Ziphi′i·i′nae (zĭf′ĭ·ĭ′nē). — ziphi′i·an (zĭf′ĭ·ăn), adj. & n. — ziphi′i·oid (-oid), adj. & n.

Ziph′i·us (zĭf′ĭ·ŭs), n. [NL., for Xiphius, fr. Gr. xiphios swordfish, fr. xiphos sword.] Zool. A genus of beaked whales allied to Hyperoodon and Mesoplodon.

zip′per (zĭp′ĕr), n. One who or that which zips; also, Colloq., one who is full of energy, vim, dash, or the like.

Zip′per (zĭp′ĕr), n. 1. A trade-mark for a kind of rubber and fabric boot fastened by a slide fastener designed to replace buttons or lacings by drawing together or loosing the folds with a single pull of an attached tab; hence [sometimes not cap.], the boot bearing this trademark.
2. [not cap.] Loosely, any slide fastening device suggesting in form or method of operation that on the Zipper, as used on various articles, as clothing, bags, pouches, blankets, etc.

zip′ping (zĭp′ĭng), adj. That zips or proceeds with speed, vigor, dash, or the like; as, a zipping ride in an airplane; also, that invigorates, gives snap or dash to; as, a zipping day. — zip′ping·ly, adv.

Zip·po′rah (zĭ·pō′rä; zĭp′ō-), n. Bib. Daughter of Jethro and wife of Moses.

zip′py (zĭp′ĭ), adj.; ZIP′PI·ER (-ĭ·ĕr); ZIP′PI·EST. [From zip.] Brisk; snappy. Colloq.

Zips (tsĭps), n. [G., the district.] An inhabitant of a district formerly in northern Hungary, now in Czechoslovakia, largely settled in the 12th and 13th centuries by German (Saxon) immigrants.

Zi′rak (zē′räk), n. sing. & pl. A division of the Durani.

zirc′ite (zûr′kĭt), zirk′ite, n. [zirconium + -ite.] See ZIRCONIA.

zir′co·flu′o·ride (zûr′kō·flōō′ō·rīd; -rĭd), n. A fluozirconate. See FLUOZIRCONIC ACID.

zir′con (zûr′kŏn), n. [F., orig. the same word as jargon. See JARGON a variety of zircon.] Mineral. Zirconium orthosilicate, $ZrSiO_4$, a tetragonal mineral occurring usually in square prisms or pyramids of adamantine luster and brown or grayish color. H., 7.5. Sp. gr., usually about 4.7. Transparent varieties are used as gems, esp. the red or brownish kinds called hyacinth (see STARLITE). Colorless, pale-yellow, or smoky varieties from Ceylon are called jargon.

zir′con·ate (-kŏn·āt), n. Chem. A salt of zirconium hydroxide, $Zr(OH)_4$ or $ZrO(OH)_2$, in its capacity of an acid (zirconic acid); as, sodium zirconate, Na_2ZrO_3.

zir·co′ni·a (zĕr·kō′nĭ·ä), n. [NL.] Chem. Zirconium dioxide, ZrO_2, occurring native as baddeleyite and usually obtained artificially as a white amorphous powder. Because of its infusibility, and brilliant luminosity when incandescent, it has been used in lighting, as in the Nernst lamp. It is also used in making enamels opaque, in refractory crucibles, etc. Native zirconia is used for furnace linings, in the form of both bricks and cement, under the name of zircite.

zi′mome. Var. of ZYMOME.

zir′co- (zûr′kō-). = ZIRCONO-.

zir′co·na (zûr′kō·nä), n. [NL.] Chem. Zirconia. Obs.

zirconi-. = ZIRCONO-.

zir·co′ni·an (zĕr·kō′nĭ·ăn), adj = ZIRCONIC.

zir·con'ic (zĕr·kŏn'ĭk), adj. Chem. Of, pertaining to, containing, or like, zirconium; as, zirconic acid (see ZIRCONATE).

zir'con·if'er·ous (zûr'kŏn·ĭf'ĕr·ŭs), adj. Containing or yielding zircon or zirconium.

zir'co·ni·fluo'ride (zûr'kŏn·ĭ·flōō'ō·rīd; -rĭd), n. Also -rid. Chem. A fluozirconate. See FLUOZIRCONIC ACID.

zir·co'ni·um (zĕr·kō'nĭ·ŭm), n. [NL.] Chem. A metallic element found (in combined form only) in zircon, baddelelite, and certain other minerals, and isolated as a black powder or as a white crystalline substance (sp. gr., 6.4) resembling white cast iron. Symbol, Zr; at. no., 40; at. wt., 91.22. It is quadrivalent, and has both basic and acid properties.

zircon light. Physics. A light, similar to the calcium light, produced by incandescent zirconia. See ZIRCONIA.

zir'co·no- (zûr'kō·nō-). Chem. Combining forms denoting the presence of zirconium.

zir'co·no·flu'o·ride (-flōō'ō·rīd; -rĭd), n. Also -rid. [zircono- + fluoride.] Chem. A fluozirconate. See FLUOZIRCONIC ACID.

zir'con·oid (zûr'kŏn·oid), n. [zircon + -oid.] Cryst. A double pyramid with eight sides, a form common with tetragonal crystals; — so called because frequent in zircon crystals.

zir'con–sy'e·nite. Petrog. A local variety of nephelite-syenite containing much zircon; — more properly called zircon-nephelite-syenite.

zir'co·nyl (zûr'kō·nĭl), n. [zircono- + -yl.] Chem. The bivalent radical ZrO; as, zironyl chloride, $ZrOCl_2$.

zir'kel·ite (zûr'kĕl·ĭt), n. [After F. Zirkel (1838–1912), Ger. mineralogist.] Petrog. A basaltic glass; sordawalite.

zith'er (zĭth'ĕr), n. [G., fr. L. cithara. See CITHER.] Music. An instrument having from thirty to forty strings over a shallow sounding box, set horizontally before the performer. A fretted finger board at one side lies under some of the strings, on which the melody is played by a plectrum on the right thumb, these strings being stopped with the left hand. The remaining strings are tuned in fourths and plucked by the fingers of the right hand. Not to be confounded with the old lute-shaped cittern.

Zither.

zith'er, v. i. To play on the zither.

zith'er·ist (-ĭst), n. A player on the zither.

Zi·za'ni·a (zĭ·zā'nĭ·ȧ), n. [LL. zizanium darnel, cockle, fr. Gr. zizanion.] Bot. A genus of tall monoecious grasses having long flat leaves and ample panicles of one-flowered spikelets. Z. aquatica, the wild rice, or Indian rice, of North America, and Z. latifolia of Asia are the only species.

Ziz'i·a (zĭz'ĭ·ȧ), n. [NL., after I. B. Ziz, Ger. botanist.] Bot. A small genus of North American herbs of the carrot family (Ammiaceae), with ternately compound leaves, yellow flowers in compound umbels, and flat, wingless fruit. Z. aurea is the golden meadow parsnip.

‖zi·zith' (tsē·tsēt'; tsĭ'tsĭs), n. pl. [Heb. tsĕtsīth.] The tassels of twisted cords or threads on the corners of the tallith (def. b) or of an upper garment worn by strict Jews. The Hebrew for this word is translated in both the Authorized and Revised Versions (Deut. xxii. 12) by the word "fringes."

Ziz'y·phus (zĭz'ĭ·fŭs), n. [L., jujube tree. See JUJUBE.] Bot. a A large genus of spiny chiefly tropical American and Asiatic shrubs (family Rhamnaceae) having triple-veined leaves and small cymose flowers with a two-celled ovary. Many bear edible fruits, and others are cultivated for ornament or as hedge plants. See JUJUBE, 1; LOTUS TREE, 1 a; CHRIST'S-THORN a. b [not cap.] Any plant of this genus.

zizz (zĭz), n. [Imitative.] A sound expressing the noise made by a body proceeding at high speed, a wheel rapidly rotating, or the like; a whiz; whir. — v. i. To make a zizz; to go, move, turn, or the like, with a zizz. "Trolleys went zizzing along." Mary Austin.

Under the form of a commentary on the Pentateuch, it contains a complete cabalistic theosophy, treating of God, the cosmogony and cosmology of the universe, the soul, sin, redemption, etc. Its contents indicate that it is the work of many authors, periods, and civilizations.

Zo'har·ist (-ĭst), Zo'har·ite (-ĭt), n. A Frankist; — from the sect's adoption of the Zohar as its Bible.

zo·i'a·tri'a (zō·ĭ'ȧ·trĭ'ȧ; zō'ĭ·ăt'rĭ·ȧ), n. [NL., fr. Gr. zōion an animal + -iatria.] The science and art of treating the diseases and injuries of the lower animals; zoiatrics.

zo'ic (zō'ĭk), adj. [Gr. zōikos.] Zool. Of or pertaining to animals or animal life and action.

-zo'ic. A combining form, Greek zōē, life, or zōion, animal, + -ic, denoting: a Biol. Living on or growing in, as in coprozoic, cytozoic, holozoic. b Geol. An era or the group of rocks then formed, as in the words in the list below. Cf. GEOLOGY, Chart.

Agnotozoic	Cenozoic	Neozoic
Anthropozoic	Eozoic	Paleozoic
Archeozoic	Mesozoic	Proterozoic

zo'id (zō'ĭd), n. A zooid.

-zo'id. A combining form of zoid, as in spermatozoid.

zo·id'i·oph'i·lous (zō·ĭd'ĭ·ŏf'ĭ·lŭs), adj. Bot. Zoophilous.

zo'id·og'a·mous (zō'ĭd·ŏg'ȧ·mŭs), adj. [See ZOOID; -GAMOUS.] Bot. Reproducing through fertilization by a spermatozoid, or motile cell.

Zo·il'e·an (zō·ĭl'ē·ăn; zō'ĭ·lē'ăn), adj. Having the characteristics of Zoilus, a bitter, envious, unjust Greek critic, of the fourth century before Christ.

Zo'i·lism (zō'ĭ·lĭz'm), n. Likeness to Zoilus in style or manner; carping criticism; detraction. — Zo'i·list (-lĭst), n.

Bring candid eyes unto the perusal of men's works, and let not Zoilism or detraction blast well-intended labors. Sir T. Browne.

zois'ite (zois'ĭt), n. [After Baron Zois von Edelstein (1747–1819), from whom Werner received his first specimens.] Mineral. An orthorhombic mineral allied to epidote, in prismatic crystals of various colors (grayish, brown, green, rose) and also massive. It is a basic calcium aluminum orthosilicate, $HCa_2Al_3Si_3O_{13}$, the aluminum being sometimes replaced by iron. H., 6–6.5. Sp. gr., 3.25–3.37.

zois'it·i·za'tion (zois'ĭ·tĭ·zā'shŭn; -tĭ·zā'-), n. Petrog. Conversion (of feldspar) into zoisite. Cf. SAUSSURITIZE.

zo'ism (zō'ĭz'm), n. [Gr. zōē life + -ism.] 1. Reverence for animal life or belief in animal powers and influences, as among savages.

2. Biol. A doctrine, now discarded, that the phenomena of life are due to a peculiar vital principle; the theory of vital force.

— zo'ist (-ĭst), n. — zo·is'tic (zō·ĭs'tĭk), adj.

zo'kor (zō'kôr), n. [Russ.] A burrowing rodent (Myotalpa aspalax) resembling the mole rat, native of the Altai Mountains.

Zo'la·esque' (zō'lȧ·ĕsk'), adj. In the style of Zola; suggesting the style, subject matter, or the like, of the writings of Émile Zola.

Zo'la·ism (zō'lȧ·ĭz'm), n. The literary theories and practices of the French novelist Émile Zola (1840–1902); naturalism (sense 2 b), esp., formerly, in a derogatory sense. — Zo'la·ist, n. — Zo'la·is'tic (-ĭs'tĭk), adj. — Zo'la·ize (zō'lȧ·īz), v.

Zol·ler'ni·a (zŏ·lûr'nĭ·ȧ), n. [NL., after Hugo Zöller (b. 1852) Ger. explorer.] Bot. A small genus of Brazilian timber trees (family Caesalpiniaceae) with simply pinnate leaves, nearly regular flowers, and a woody legume. Some yield hard woods. See HOLY WOOD b.

Zöll'ner il·lu'sion (tsûl'nĕr). [After J. K. F. Zöllner (1834–82), Ger. physicist.] Psychol. The illusion produced by Zöllner's lines (which see).

Zöll'ner's law (tsûl'nĕrz). Astron. A formula, or law, expressing the time of axial rotation of the sun in different strata or latitudes.

Zöllner's lines. [See ZÖLLNER'S ILLUSION.] Parallel lines made to appear to converge or diverge by oblique intersections.

Zöllner's Lines.

‖Zoll'ver·ein' (tsŏl'fĕr·īn'), n. [G., fr. zoll duty + verein union.] [also not cap.] A customs union; specif., any of the several customs unions successively formed under the leadership of Prussia among certain German states for establishing free trade among themselves and a common tariff on imports, exports, and goods in transit. In 1834 one was established including most of the chief German states except Austria. In 1867 a closer organized union was formed, the administration of which was finally merged in that of the new German Empire of 1871.

zom'bi (zŏm'bĭ), n.; pl. -BIS (-bĭz). Also zom'bie; pl. -BIES (-bĭz). [Cf. Kongo zumbi fetish.] a Originally in West African voodoo cults, the deity of the python; hence, in Haiti and the southern United States, the snake deity of the voodoo rite. A hierarchy is sometimes recognized of the Grand Zombi and various lesser zombis. b The supernatural power or essence which it is believed may enter into and reanimate a dead body; also, a corpse so reanimated.

The zombi . . . is a soulless human corpse, still dead, but taken from the grave and endowed by sorcery with a mechanical semblance of life, — it is a dead body which is made to walk and act and move as if it were alive. W. B. Seabrook.

zom'bi·ism (-ĭz'm), n. Belief in the zombi; also, practice of the rites performed in connection with the worship of the zombi.

zonal symmetry. Zool. = METAMERISM, 1.

zonal view. Bot. That view of a diatom in which the zone, or girdle, is presented to the eye; — opposed to valval view.

‖zo'na or·bi'cu·la'ris (zō'nȧ ôr·bĭk'ū·lā'rĭs; 79). [L. orbicularis circular.] Anat. A set of circular fibers in the capsular ligament of the hip joint, which pass from the deep surface of the iliofemoral ligament around the neck of the femur.

‖zo'na pec'ti·na'ta (pĕk'tĭ·nā'tȧ). [L. pectinata shaped like a comb.] Anat. The outer longitudinal division of the basilar membrane of the ear.

‖zo'na pel·lu'ci·da (pĕ·lū'sĭ·dȧ). [L. pellucida transparent.] Embryol. The outer, transparent, more or less elastic layer or envelope of an ovum. It is usually traversed by numerous radiating canals.

zo'nar (zō'năr), n. Also zon'nar. [NGr. zōnari a girdle, fr. Gr. zōnarion, dim. of zōnē a girdle. See ZONE.] A belt, or girdle, which the Christians and Jews of the Levant were obliged to wear to distinguish them from Mohammedans.

‖zo'na ra'di·a'ta (zō'nȧ rā'dĭ·ā'tȧ). [NL. radiata; see RADIATA.] Embryol. The zona pellucida, esp. when the radiating canals are unusually distinct.

‖zo'na re·ti'cu·la'ris (rĕ·tĭk'ū·lā'rĭs; 79). [NL.] Anat. The innermost layer of the suprarenal cortex, characterized by reticular formation.

Zo·na'ri·a (zō·nā'rĭ·ȧ; 79), n. pl. [NL.] Zool. In Huxley's classification, a primary division of deciduate mammals consisting of those having a zonary placenta. It includes the carnivores and certain ungulates. It is now regarded as an unnatural group.

zon'a·ry (zōn'ȧ·rĭ), adj. a Of, pertaining to, or like, a zone; zonal. b Of or pertaining to the Zonaria.

zonary placenta. Zool. See PLACENTA, 1.

zon'ate (zōn'āt), adj. Also zon'at·ed (-āt·ĕd; -ĭd; 119). a Marked with zones; ringed or belted. b Bot. Arranged in a single row, as certain tetraspores.

‖zo'na tec'ta (zō'nȧ tĕk'tȧ). [L. tecta covered.] Anat. = ZONA ARCUATA.

zo·na'tion (zō·nā'shŭn), n. a State of being zoned or zonate. b Biogeog. Arrangement or distribution in zones.

‖zon'da (sōn'dä; 267), n. [Sp., perh. of S. Am. Ind. origin.] A hot wind of the Argentine pampas.

zone (zōn), n. [F., fr. L. zona, fr. Gr. zōnē; akin to Gr. zōnnynai to gird, zōma girdle, girded garment, Lith. juosta a girdle, juosti to gird.] 1. A girdle; cincture; belt; also, such a belt used to hold gold or money; a money belt. Obs. exc. Poetic.
2. Any encircling band, stripe, or girdle; as, a zone of trees; a zone around an animal or plant; more broadly, any encircling line, path, course, or the like; circuit.

The sun . . . in the great zone of heaven. Milton.

3. Any of five great divisions of the earth's surface with respect to latitude and temperature: the Torrid Zone, extending from tropic to tropic 46° 54′, or 23° 27′ on each side of the equator; two Temperate, or Variable, Zones, situated between the tropics and the polar circles, which are 23° 27′ from the poles; and two Frigid Zones, between the polar circles and the poles.

Zone, 3.

4. An area or region more or less clearly set off or characterized as distinct from surrounding or adjoining parts; as, the wheat zone; the zone of free trade; on the Isthmus of Panama, the Canal Zone; in a metalliferous region, the mineral zone; a zone of influence.
5. A section of a city, or the like, that has been zoned. See ZONE, v. t., 2.
6. In the United States parcel-post system (see PARCEL POST), any of the areas about any point of shipment for which but one rate of postage is charged for a parcel-post shipment from that point. The rates increase from within outwards. The first zone includes the unit of area (a quadrangle 34 miles long north and south, and from 23 to 30 miles east and west) in which the place of shipment is situated and the contiguous units within a mean radial distance of 50 miles; the outer limits of the second to the seventh zones, respectively, are approximately 150, 300, 600, 1000, 1400, and 1800 miles from the point of shipment; the eighth zone includes all units outside the seventh zone. From August 15, 1913, the rates for the first and second zones were made the same.
7. Anat. Any encircling area or structure having a special character or composition.
8. Astron. A belt around the heavens whose boundaries are usually parallels of declination.
9. Biogeog. a An area or part of a region characterized by uniform or similar animal and plant life; a life zone; as, littoral zone, Austral zone, Boreal zone, etc. The zones, or life zones, commonly recognized for North America are the Arctic, Hudsonian, Canadian, Transition, Upper Austral, Lower Austral, and Tropical. See also ABYSSAL ZONE, LITTORAL ZONE, PELAGIC ZONE. b A similar area dominated by a particular form or forms of plant or animal life; as, the laminarian zone below low-tide mark where the brown algae are most abundant.

Zone, 9 a. Diagram showing L Littoral, P Pelagic, and A Abyssal Zones.

10. Cryst. A series of faces whose intersection lines with each other are all parallel.
11. Geol. & Paleontol. A belt, layer, or series of layers of rock, regular or irregular, disposed horizontally, vertically, concentrically, or otherwise, characterized by some particular property, action, or content; as, the zone of saturation; the Eohippus zone, etc.
12. Math. The portion of the surface of a sphere included between two parallel planes; the part of a surface of revolution between two planes perpendicular to the axis.
13. Physiol. & Psychol. In the retina of the eye, any of three regions differing in color sensitivity. All hues can be seen with the inner, or central, zone; blue and yellow with the middle; and only colorless light with the outer.
14. Railroad Econ. a The aggregate of stations, in whatsoever direction or on whatsoever line of railroad, situated between certain maximum and minimum limits from a point at which a shipment of traffic originates. See ZONE TARIFF. b Any circular or ring-shaped area within which the streetcar companies make no differences of fare.
15. Sports. Any area on a field of play definitely marked off by zone lines. In some games, as American football, the rules prescribe certain restrictions on methods and types of offense when the play reaches designated zones.
Syn. — Band, circle; area, region, tract.
☞ COMBINATIONS are:
zone-confounding, zone-marked, zone-tailed.

zone (zōn), v.; ZONED (zōnd); ZON'ING (zōn'ĭng). Transitive: 1. To encircle or embrace; to include within a zone or zones; to mark off into zones.
2. City Planning. To partition (a city, borough, or township) by ordinance into zones or sections to be reserved for different purposes, as residence, business, or manufacturing, or combinations of these, and within which the buildings may not exceed prescribed heights or cover more than a designated percentage of the area of lots, etc.
—, Intransitive: To be marked off into zones; to make or form a zone or zones.

zone axis. Cryst. A straight line through the center of a crystal, to which all faces of a given zone are parallel.

zone catalogue. Astron. A catalogue of stars observed in zones.

zoned (zōnd), adj. 1. Wearing a zone, or girdle; chaste.
2. Having zones, or concentric bands; striped; zonate.
3. Arranged in or marked with zones.

zone fire. Mil. Fire delivered at successive ranges and sometimes with varying deflections in order to cover surely the area in which the target lies.

zone line. A line marking the limit or boundary of a zone (in various senses); specif.: a See FOOTBALL, n., 2, 2d Illust. b Ice Hockey. = DEFENDING LINE.

zone of action. Mil. An area of responsibility, defined by boundaries, and assigned to a unit in any situation involving movement, as advance, retreat, attack, or withdrawal. Cf. SECTOR.

zone of clouds. Meteorol. A belt of clouds prevailing over the ocean near the equator.

zone of defense. Mil. = DEFENSIVE ZONE.

zone of fire. Mil. The belt of terrain brought under fire from any defensive position.

zone of flow or flowage. Geol. The subsurface part of the earth in which the fracturing of rocks is prevented by pressure, and all deformation is by a sort of flow. It includes the larger part of the earth, and underlies the zone of fracture, or that part of the earth's crust in which deformation may result in and be accomplished by fracture. Between the zone of fracture and the zone of flow there is a zone of combined fracture and flow, where the rocks may break or flow according to the conditions of deformation, the strength of the materials, etc.

zone of influence or operations. Internat. Law. See SPHERE OF INFLUENCE.

zone of mobility. Geol. = ASTHENOSPHERE.

zone of Ro·lan'do (rō·lăn'dō; -län'dō). [After L. Rolando (1773–1831), It. anatomist.] Anat. The motor area of the cerebral cortex. See AREA, 7.

zone of the interior. Mil. That part of the theater of war which is not included within the theater of operations.

zone of war. = THEATER OF WAR.

zone of weakness. Geol. = ASTHENOSPHERE.

zone phenomenon. Immunol. The occurrence of a prezone in the effectiveness of serum dilutions.

zone plate. Physics. A focusing device consisting of a series of concentric opaque rings of such width that rays from certain zones are prevented from passing through the plate.

zon'es·the'si·a, zon'aes·the'si·a (zōn'ĕs·thē'zhĭ·ȧ; -zhȧ; -zĭ·ȧ), n. [NL. See ZONE; ESTHESIA.] Med. Girdle sensation.

zone tariff, zone system. A tariff or system, formerly used in Austria-Hungary, under which passenger tickets read to any station within certain distance limits, or zones, the same ticket being good in all directions and on all lines so long as the maximum distance is not exceeded.

zone time. Naut. & Navig. Standard time applied at sea. The surface of the globe is considered as divided into 24 zones of 15° or one hour each, the 0 zone extending 7½° east and west of the meridian of Greenwich. The zones are designated by the number of hours which must be applied to the local time to obtain Greenwich time, as Zone 5, for 75th meridian time. Ships' clocks are set to zone time.

Zon·go'ra (zŏng·gō'rȧ), n. sing. & pl. One of a Negro tribe in East Africa, southwest of Lake Victoria, in the Bukoba region, Tanganyika Territory. Also, their language.

zon'ic (zōn'ĭk), n. Belt; zone. Rare.

zo·nif'er·ous (zō·nĭf'ĕr·ŭs), adj. [L. zona zone + -ferous.] Having a zone or zones; zoned.

zon'ing (zōn'ĭng), n. Separation into zones or as a zone, esp. in city planning. — zon'ing, adj.
☞ PHRASES are:
zoning act, zoning commission, zoning law, zoning ordinance.

zo'nite (zō'nīt), n. [See ZONITES.] Zool. A body segment, or somite, of a diplopod.

Zo·ni'tes (zō·nī'tēz), n. [NL., fr. Gr. zōnē girdle.] Zool. A genus of small terrestrial snails, having a thin, depressed shell with sharp peristome. It is the type of a family, Zo·nit'i·dae (zō·nĭt'ĭ·dē), of the order Pulmonata. — zo'ni·tid (zō'nĭ·tĭd), adj. & n.

Zo'ni·toi'des (zō'nĭ·toi'dēz), n. [NL. See ZONITES; -OID.] Zool. A genus of usually small, rather flat, amber-colored land snails (family Zonitidae) with a simple lip not turned back.

zo'no- (zō'nō-), zon-. A combining form, Greek zōno-, zōn-, from zōnē belt, girdle, used for zone, as in *zono*placental, *Zon*ites, zo'no·skel'e·ton.

zo'no·chlo'rite (-klō'rīt), n. [zono- + Gr. chlōros green; — in allusion to its structure.] Mineral. An impure variety of prehnite occurring in green pebbles of banded structure.

zo'no·cil'i·ate (-sĭl'ĭ·ăt), adj. [zono- + ciliate.] Zool. Having a zone or band, of cilia, as certain annelid larvae.

zo'no·lim·net'ic (zō'nō·lĭm·nĕt'ĭk), adj. [zono- + limnetic.] Zool. Pertaining to a definite zone in depth; — said of certain fresh-water planktonic animals.

zo'no·pla·cen'tal (-plȧ·sĕn'tăl), adj. [zono- + placental.] Zool. a Having a zonary placenta, as some mammals. b Of or pertaining to the Zonoplacentalia, or Zonaria.

Zo'no·trich'i·a (-trĭk'ĭ·ȧ), n. [NL., fr. zono- + -trichia.] Zool. See CROWN SPARROW.

‖zo'nu·la (zō'nū·lȧ; zŏn'ū·lȧ), n. [L.] A zonule; specif., the zonule of Zinn.

zonule of Zinn (tsĭn). Anat. The suspensory ligament of the crystalline lens of the eye.

zo'nu·let (zō'nū·lĕt), n. A little girdle. Herrick.

Zo·nu'ri·dae (zō·nū'rĭ·dē), n. pl. [NL., fr. Gr. zōnē a girdle + oura tail.] Zool. A family of pleurodont lizards of southern and tropical Africa, having a short, feebly protractile tongue and with osteoderms at least on the head. The type genus is Zo·nu'rus (-rŭs). — zo'nure (zō'nūr), n. — zo·nu'rid (zō·nū'rĭd), zo·nu'roid (-roid), adj. & n.

zoo (zōō), n. A zoological garden or collection; — orig. a humorous or colloquial abbreviation applied to the Zoological Gardens in London.

zoo. Var. of SO.

zo'o- (zō'ō-), zo-. [See ZOON.] A combining form, Greek zōo-, zō-, from zōion, animal, denoting animal, the animal kingdom, zoological (and), as in *zo*ology, *zo*anthropy. The meanings of the following can be understood from the definitions of their elements.

zo'o·ben'thos (zō'ō·bĕn'thŏs), n. [NL., fr. zoo- + benthos.] Biogeog. Animal life in the benthos.

zo'o·blast (zō'ō·blăst), n. [zoo- + -blast.] An animal cell.

zo'o·ce·cid'i·um (-sē·sĭd'ĭ·ŭm), n.; pl. -CECIDIA (-ȧ). [NL., fr. zoo- + cecidium.] Zool. A plant gall caused by an animal, usually an insect or nematode worm.

zo'o·chem'y (zō'ō·kĕm'ĭ), n. [zoo- + Gr. chēmia alchemy.] = ZOOCHEMISTRY.

zo'o·chore (-kōr), n. [zoo- + -chore.] Bot. A plant distributed by living animals.

zo'o·coe'no·cyte (-sē'nō·sīt), n. Bot. One of the peculiar ciliated, coenocytic zoospores in the green alga Vaucheria.

zo'o·cul'ture (zō'ō·kŭl'tūr), n. Anthropol. The control and domestication of animals, particularly among primitive peoples. — zo'o·cul'tur·al (-kŭl'tūr·ăl), adj.

zo'o·cur'rent (-kŭr'ĕnt), n. Zool. An oceanic current in which great quantities of planktonic organisms are found.

zo'o·cy'ti·um (zō'ō·sĭsh'ĭ·ŭm), n.; pl. ZOOCYTIA (-ȧ). [NL., fr. zoo- + Gr. kytos a hollow vessel.] Zool. The common gelatinous support, often branched, of certain social Infusoria. — zo'o·cy'tial (-sĭsh'ăl), adj.

zo'o·den'dri·um (-dĕn'drĭ·ŭm), n.; pl. -DRIA (-ȧ). [NL., fr. zoo- + Gr. dendron a tree.] Zool. The branched, and often treelike, support of the colonies of certain Infusoria.

zo'o·dy·nam'ics (-dĭ·năm'ĭks; -dĭ-), n.; see -ICS. Zool. The science which treats of the vital powers of animals. — zo'o·dy·nam'ic (-ĭk), adj.

zo·oe'ci·um (zō·ē'shĭ·ŭm), n.; pl. ZOOECIA (-ȧ). [NL., fr. zoo- + Gr. oikos house.] Zool. One of the cells or tubes which enclose the feeding zooids of Bryozoa. See BRYOZOA, Illust. — zo·oe'cial (-shăl), adj.

zo'o·e·ryth'rin (zō'ō·ē·rĭth'rĭn; -ē·rĭth'-), n. A red pigment in the plumage of various birds, as flamingos, ibises, etc.

zo'o·ful'vin (-fūl'vĭn), n. [zoo- + L. fulvus yellow.] Biochem. A yellow pigment from the plumage of certain birds, as the touracos.

zo'o·ga·mete' (zō'ō·gȧ·mēt'), n. Bot. A planogamete.

zo·og'a·my (zō·ŏg'ȧ·mĭ), n. Zool. The sexual reproduction of animals. — zo·og'a·mous (-mŭs), adj.

zo·og'e·nous (zō·ŏj'ē·nŭs), adj. [zoo- + -genous.] Med. Originating from animals, as a disease.

zo'o·ge·og'ra·phy (zō'ō·jē·ŏg'rȧ·fĭ), n. [zoo- + geography.] The study or description of the geographical distribution of animals; esp., the determination of the land zo'o·gloe'a (zō'ō-glē'ȧ), n. [NL., fr. zoo- + Gr. gloioa a glutinous substance.] Bacteriol. A mass of bacteria embedded in a mucilaginous or jellylike substance formed by the swelling of the cell membranes through absorption of water. This development occurs regularly in the life history of some species under certain conditions, and is hence called the zoogloea stage. The term is sometimes extended to certain of the lower algae. Cf. PALMELLA. — zo'o·gloe'al (-ăl), adj. — zo'o·gloe'ic (-ĭk), adj.

zo'o·go·nid'i·um (zō'ō-gō-nĭd'ĭ·ŭm), n. [NL., fr. zoo- + gonidium.] Bot. An active or motile gonidium; a swarm spore or zoospore.

zo·og'o·nous (zō-ŏg'ō-nŭs), adj. [Gr. zōiogonos producing animals.] Zool. Viviparous.

zo'o·graft'ing (zō'ō-grăft'ĭng), n. Surg. Use of animal tissue in grafting. — zo'o·graft', n.

zo·og'ra·pher (zō-ŏg'rȧ-fĕr), n. Also zo·og'ra·phist (-fĭst). One who describes or depicts animals, their forms and habits.

zo·og'ra·phy (-fĭ), n. [zoo- + -graphy.] A description of animals, their forms and habits. — zo'o·graph'ic (zō'ō-grăf'ĭk), -graph'i·cal (-ĭ-kăl), adj. — zo'o·graph'i·cal·ly, adv.

zo'oid (zō'oid), n. [zoo- + -oid; cf. Gr. zōioeidēs like an animal.] Biol. An entity which resembles but is not wholly the same as a separate individual animal; specif.: a An organic body or cell having locomotion, as a sperm cell. b Zool. A more or less independent animal produced by fission, proliferation, strobilation, or the like, and not by direct sexual methods, and so having an equivocal individuality; — usually applied to any one of the persons of a compound organism, as a hydroid, coral, or bryozoan colony, though by some restricted to those persons in such a colony that lack the mouth and digestive organs. c Zool. Any of the individuals which, in alternation of generations, come between the products of true sexual reproduction, as the free-swimming medusa of a hydroid colony, or the parthenogenetically produced offspring of an aphid.

-zo'oid. A combining form of zooid, as in anthero*zooid*, dactylo*zooid*.

zo·oi'dal (zō-oi'dăl), adj. [See ZOOID, n.] Biol. Pertaining to a zooid; resembling an animal.

zo·oi'di·oph'i·lous (zō-oi'dĭ-ŏf'ĭ·lŭs), adj. Bot. Zoophilous.

zo'o·log'i·cal (zō'ō-lŏj'ĭ·kăl), adj. Also zo'o·log'ic (-ĭk). 1. Of, pertaining to, or engaged in zoology. 2. Animal. Humorous. — zo'o·log'i·cal·ly, adv.

zoological garden. A garden or park where wild animals are kept for exhibition; (pron. locally zōō'(ŭ)·lŏj'ĭ·kăl) orig. [caps.], that in Regents' Park, London.

zo'o·log'i·co- (zō'ō-lŏj'ĭ·kō-). A combining form for zoologic, meaning zoologically, zoological and, as in zo'o·log'i·co-ar'chae·ol'o·gist, zo'o·log'i·co-bo·tan'i·cal.

zo·ol'o·gist (zō-ŏl'ō-jĭst), n. One who is versed in zoology.

zo·ol'o·gize (-jīz), v. i.; -GIZED (-jīzd); -GIZ'ING (-jīz'ĭng). To study zoology; esp., to collect animals for study. — v. t. To subject to zoological investigation.

zo·ol'o·gy (-jĭ), n.; pl. -GIES (-jĭz). [zoo- + -logy. See ZODIAC.] 1. The science which treats of animals (see ANIMAL, n., 1); the branch of biology dealing with the animal kingdom and its members (as individuals and classes) and with animal life. Zoology, in its broadest sense, includes animal morphology (together with anatomy, histology, and cytology), physiology, embryology, genetics, taxonomy, paleontology, ecology (bionomics, ethology), and various other sciences in whole or in part. There are also numerous divisions named according to the particular groups of animals with which they deal, as, entomology treating of insects; ichthyology, of fishes; ornithology, of birds; protozoology, of protozoans, including their economic and pathological relation to man; etc. As a science zoology dates from Aristotle (384–322 B.C.), who proposed a rough classification of animals. The science advanced but little until the 17th century, which was notable for Harvey's study of the circulation of the blood, Malpighi's discoveries with the microscope, and John Ray's limitation of the term species. In the 18th century Linnaeus established the binomial system of nomenclature (see NOMENCLATURE), and recognized groups higher than species. Early in the 19th century Cuvier worked along the lines of comparative anatomy and paleontology and Lamarck enunciated his theory of evolution (see LAMARCKISM). Schwann discovered the animal cell, and important foundations of embryology and physiology were laid in this period. In 1859 Charles Darwin published his theory of evolution (see DARWINISM), supported by Wallace, Huxley, and many others. It led to the abandonment of the old idea of the fixity of species and to the modern conception of classification as reflecting phylogeny. Since the rediscovery in 1900 of Mendel's discoveries (1866) concerning heredity, genetics has greatly advanced by experimental and cytological research, esp. on the nature and action of genes. This century has also seen embryology and morphology placed upon an experimental basis, cytology advanced by microtechnic applied to living cells, and all fields drawn into closer relation with physiology. Discoveries in ecology and parasitology have had economically important applications, as in prevention of disease by elimination of the pathogen vectors and in the control of pests by their natural enemies.

☞ Zoology (Zool.) is prefixed to definitions in this Dictionary to indicate the subject matter or the field in which the word or sense is typically used. Thus applied, the term is used in its broadest meaning and may include everything covered by sense 1, above. In general, however, Paleontology is prefixed to the definitions in that field, and certain other labels, as Ecology, are sometimes substituted for the broader Zoology.

2. A treatise on zoology.

3. Animal life, as of a region; as, the zoology of Australia; the properties and life phenomena exhibited by an animal, animal type, or group; as, the zoology of a crustacean.

zoom (zōōm), v. i. [Imitative.] To make or move with a loud but low hum or buzz; specif., Aviation, to climb for a short time at an angle greater than that which can be maintained in steady flight, the machine being carried upward at the expense of its stored kinetic energy. — v. t. To cause to zoom. — n. Act of zooming; any sudden increase in the upward slope of the flight path.

zo'o·mag'net·ism (zō'ō-măg'nĕ·tĭz'm; -nĭ·tĭz'm), n. Animal magnetism. — zo'o·mag·net'ic (-măg·nĕt'ĭk), adj.

Zo·o·mas'ti·gi'na (-măs'tĭ·jī'nȧ), n. pl. [NL., fr. zoo- + mastig- + -ina.] Zool. A subclass of Mastigophora including the animal flagellates with a holozoic method of nutrition. They contain no chromatophores or chlorophyll. Cf. PHYTOMASTIGINA.

zo'o·mel'a·nin (-mĕl'ȧ-nĭn), n. A black pigment in the feathers of birds.

zo·om'e·try (zō-ŏm'ē-trĭ), n. [zoo- + -metry.] Scientific measurement of animals. — zo'o·met'ric (zō'ō-mĕt'rĭk), adj.

zo'o·mi·met'ic (zō'ō-mĭ·mĕt'ĭk; -mī-), adj. [zoo- + mimetic.] Ethnol. Imitative of an animal or animal organ or part.

zo'o·mim'ic (-mĭm'ĭk), adj. Zoomimetic.

zo'o·morph (zō'ō-môrf), n. [zoo- + -morph.] Something in the form of an animal; specif., Anthropol., a conventional image or symbol of a zoomorphic deity or supernatural being.

zo'o·mor'phic (-môr'fĭk), adj. [zoo- + -morphic.] Of or pertaining to zoomorphism.

zo'o·mor'phic, adj. a Resembling an animal. b Designating or pertaining to a zoomorphized deity or supernatural being. c Pertaining to or like a zoomorph.

zo'o·mor'phism (zō'ō-môr'fĭz'm), n. 1. The representation of God, or of gods, in the form, or with the attributes, of the lower animals.

To avoid the error of anthropomorphism, we fall into the vastly greater, and more absurd, error of zoomorphism. Mivart.

2. Use of animal forms in art or symbolism.

zo'o·mor'phize (-fīz), v. t. Anthropol. To conceive of, or to symbolize, or represent a deity or supernatural being as an animal; as a Bear Spirit, a Raven Father, etc zo'o·mor'phy (zō'ō-môr'fĭ), n. Zoomorphism.

zo'on (zō'ŏn), n.; pl. ZOA (-ȧ). [NL., fr. Gr. zōion an animal; akin to Gr. zōē life. See QUICK; cf. ZODIAC.] Zool. a An animal which is the sole product of a single egg; — opposed to zooid. H. Spencer. b Any of the perfectly developed individuals of a compound animal. — zo'on·al (zō'ŏn·ăl), adj.

-zo'on. [NL. See ZOON.] A combining form from Greek zōion, an animal, a living being, as in anthozoon, polyzoon, protozoon.

zo'on·e·ryth'rin (zō'ŏn·ē·rĭth'rĭn; -ē·rĭth'-), n. Zooerythrin.

zo·on'ic (zō-ŏn'ĭk), adj. [Gr. zōion an animal; cf. F. zoonique.] 1. Of or pertaining to animals; got from animal substances.

2. Acetic; as, (Obs.) zoonic acid. Rare.

zo'on·ist (zō'ŏn·ĭst), n. One who believes in a living force existing throughout nature and constituting nature as a whole.

zo'o·nite (zō'ō-nīt), n. Zool. One of the body segments of an articulate or vertebrate animal. Rare. — zo'o·nit'ic (-nĭt'ĭk), adj.

zo·on'o·sis (zō-ŏn'ō-sĭs), n.; pl. ZOONOSES (-sēz). [NL., fr. zoo- + -nosis.] a A disease communicable from animals to each other or to man. b A disease due to animal parasites. — zo'o·not'ic (zō'ō-nŏt'ĭk), adj.

zo'o·no·sol'o·gy (-nō-sŏl'ō-jĭ), n. Zool. Zoopathology. Rare. — zo'o·no·sol'o·gist (-jĭst), n.

zo'o·nule (zō'ō-nūl), n. [Dim. fr. Gr. zōion an animal.] Zool. A zoonite. Rare.

zo'o·pa'le·on·tol'o·gy (-pā'lē-ŏn·tŏl'ō-jĭ), n. Paleozoology.

zo'o·pan·the'on (zō'ō-păn·thē'ŏn; -păn'thē-ŏn; cf. PANTHEON), n. A pantheon of deities having animal forms. Rare.

zo'o·pa·thol'o·gy (-pȧ-thŏl'ō-jĭ), n. Zool. The science or study of the diseases of the lower animals; zoonosology. — zo'o·path'o·log'i·cal (-păth'ō-lŏj'ĭ·kăl), adj. — zo'o·pa·thol'o·gist (-pȧ-thŏl'ō-jĭst), n.

zo·op'er·y (zō-ŏp'ĕr·ĭ), n. [zoo- + Gr. peira trial.] Zool. Experimentation on the lower animals. — zo·op'er·al (-ăl), adj. — zo·op'er·ist (-ĭst), n.

Zo·oph'a·ga (zō-ŏf'ȧ-gȧ), n. pl. [NL., fr. zoo- + -phaga.] Zool. Carnivorous animals; — a term applied to various artificial groups of flesh-eating and insectivorous forms. — zo·oph'a·gan (-găn), n. — zo·oph'a·gous (-gŭs), adj.

zo'o·phar'ma·co·log'i·cal (zō'ō-fär'mȧ-kō-lŏj'ĭ·kăl), adj. Of or pertaining to the pharmacology of animal organs or tissues.

zo'o·phar'ma·cy (-fär'mȧ·sĭ), n. Veterinary pharmacy.

zo'o·phile (zō'ō-fīl; -fĭl), n. [zoo- + -phile.] A zoophilous plant; also, a zoophilist.

zo'o·phil'i·a (-fĭl'ĭ·ȧ), n. Also zo·oph'i·lism (zō-ŏf'ĭ·lĭz'm), zo·oph'i·ly (-lĭ). [NL., fr. zoo- + -philia.] Love of animals, esp., Psychoanalysis, as an erotic fixation or regression. — zo'o·phil'ic (zō'ō-fĭl'ĭk), adj.

zo·oph'i·list (zō-ŏf'ĭ·lĭst), n. [zoo- + Gr. philos loving.] A lover of animals; one having zoophilia.

zo·oph'i·lite (-līt), n. A zoophilist. — zo·oph'i·lit'ic (-lĭt'ĭk), adj.

zo·oph'i·lous (-lŭs), adj. [zoo- + -philous.] Animal-loving; specif.: a Bot. Adapted to pollination by animals other than insects. Cf. ANEMOPHILOUS, ENTOMOPHILOUS, etc. b Psychoanalysis. Exhibiting zoophilia. c Zool. Fond of, and hence feeding on animals; — said of certain insects as mosquitoes, fleas, lice, etc.

zo'o·pho'bi·a (zō'ō-fō'bĭ·ȧ), n. [NL., fr. zoo- + -phobia.] 1. Morbid fear of animals.

2. Anthropol. The fear of animal spirits, or supernatural beings regarded as zoomorphized spirits.

zo·oph'o·bous (zō-ŏf'ō-bŭs), adj. Having a morbid fear of animals.

zo·oph'o·rus (zō-ŏf'ō-rŭs), n.; pl. -RI (-rī). [L., fr. Gr. zōiophoros, fr. zōion an animal + pherein to bear.] Class. Arch. A frieze having continuous relief sculptures of men or animals or both. — zo'o·phor'ic (zō'ō-fŏr'ĭk), adj.

zo'o·phys'ics (zō'ō-fĭz'ĭks), n. Zool. Zoology which relates to the physical structure and uses of the organs of animals. — zo'o·phys'i·cal (-ĭ·kăl), adj.

Zo·oph'y·ta (zō-ŏf'ĭ·tȧ), n. pl. [NL. See ZOOPHYTE.] Zool. In many old classifications, an extensive artificial and heterogeneous group of invertebrates mostly incapable of locomotion. It commonly included all or many of the forms now regarded as coelenterates, sponges, bryozoans, echinoderms, protozoans, and worms, but by some more recent writers has been restricted to coelenterates and sponges, or to Anthozoa.

zo'o·phyte (zō'ō-fīt), n. [NL. zoophyton, fr. Gr. zōophyton, fr. zōion animal + phyton plant. See ZODIAC; PHYTO-.] 1. A plant resembling an animal. Obs.

2. Zool. Any of numerous invertebrate animals more or less resembling plants in appearance or mode of growth, as the corals, gorgonians, sea anemones, hydroids, bryozoans, sponges, etc., esp. any of those that form compound colonies of a branched or treelike form, as many corals and hydroids; one of the Zoophyta. — zo'o·phy'tal (-fī'tăl; -t'l), adj. — zo'o·phyt'ic (-fĭt'ĭk), zo'o·phyt'i·cal (-ĭ-kăl), adj. — zo'o·phyt'ish (zō'ō-fĭt'ĭsh), adj. — zo·oph'y·toid (zō-ŏf'ĭ·toid), adj.

zo'o·phy·tog'ra·phy (zō'ō-fĭ·tŏg'rȧ-fĭ), n. [See ZOOPHYTE; -GRAPHY.] Descriptive zoology relating to zoophytes.

zo'o·phy·tol'o·gy (-fĭ·tŏl'ō-jĭ), n. [zoophyte + -logy.] The branch of zoology which treats of zoophytes. — zo'o·phy'to·log'i·cal (-fĭ'tō-lŏj'ĭ·kăl), adj. — zo'o·phy·tol'o·gist (-fĭ·tŏl'ō-jĭst), n.

zo'o·plank'ton (-plăngk'tŏn), n. Zool. That portion of the plankton which consists of animals. — zo'o·plank·ton'ic (-plăngk·tŏn'ĭk), adj.

zo'o·plas'ty (zō'ō-plăs'tĭ), n. [zoo- + -plasty.] Surg. Act or process of grafting animal tissue into the human body. — zo'o·plas'tic (-plăs'tĭk), adj.

zo'o·prax'i·scope (-prăk'sĭ·skōp), n. [zoo- + Gr. praxis a doing + -scope.] An early form of motion-picture projector.

zo'o·psy·chol'o·gy (-sī·kŏl'ō-jĭ), n. Zool. The psychology of animals other than man. — zo'o·psy'cho·log'i·cal (-sī'-kō-lŏj'ĭ·kăl), adj. — zo'o·psy·chol'o·gist (-sī·kŏl'ō-jĭst), n.

zo'os'co·py (zō-ŏs'kō-pĭ), n. [zoo- + -scopy.] Med. A hallucination, as in delirium tremens, in which the patient believes he sees animals. — zo'o·scop'ic (zō'ō-skŏp'ĭk), adj.

zo·o'sis (zō-ō'sĭs), n. [NL., fr. 1st zo- + -osis.] Med. Any disease due to an animal agent, as an animal parasite.

zo'o·spo·ran'gi·o·phore' (-răn'jĭ·ō-fōr'; 181), n. Bot. A sporangiophore which bears zoosporangia.

zo'o·spo·ran'gi·um (-ŭm), n.; pl. -SPORANGIA (-ȧ). [NL.] Bot. A spore case, or sporangium, with zoospores. — zo'o·spo·ran'gi·al (-ăl), adj.

zo'o·spore (zō'ō-spōr; 181), n. Called also swarm spore. 1. Bot. An asexual spore with one or more slender cilia, by the vibration of which it swims. Zoospores are produced by many green, and by some olive-brown, algae and also by many of the lower phycomycetous fungi (Oömycetes). In some species they are divided into the larger megazoospores and the smaller microzoospores. Loosely, a zoogonidium or a planogamete. See SPORE, GAMETE, GONIDIUM.

2. Zool. One of the minute motile flagellate or amoeboid bodies into which the protoplasm of a sporocyst divides. — zo'o·spor'ic (-spŏr'ĭk), adj. — zo'o·spo·rif'er·ous (-spō-rĭf'ĕr·ŭs), adj. — zo·os'po·rous (zō-ŏs'pō-rŭs; zō'ō-spō'rŭs; 181), adj.

zo'o·spo'ro·cyst (zō'ō-spō'rō-sĭst), n. [zoospore + cyst.] Bot. A unicellular zoosporangium. Cf. SPOROCYST.

zo'o·tax'y (zō'ō-tăk'sĭ), n. [zoo- + -taxy.] Zoological taxonomy.

zo'o·tech'ny (-tĕk'nĭ). 1. Zool. The breeding and domestication of animals, scientifically viewed.

2. Anthropol. As a division of primitive technology, the methods and devices for capturing and utilizing animals. — zo'o·tech'nic (-tĕk'nĭk), adj.

zo'o·the'ci·um (-thē'shĭ·ŭm; -sĭ·ŭm), n.; pl. -CIA (-ȧ). [NL., fr. zoo- + Gr. thēkion, dim. of thēkē box.] Zool. A zoocytium. — zo'o·the'ci·al (-shĭ·ăl), adj.

zo'o·the·ism (zō'ō-thē·ĭz'm), n. Belief in animal gods. — zo'o·the'ist, n. & adj. — zo'o·the·is'tic (-thē·ĭs'tĭk), adj.

zo'o·ther'a·py (-thĕr'ȧ-pĭ), n. Veterinary therapeutics.

zo'o·thome (zō'ō-thōm), n. [zoo- + Gr. thōmos heap.] Zool. A group of zooids of a compound anthozoan or living coral mass.

zo·ot'ic (zō-ŏt'ĭk), adj. [Gr. zōion animal.] Containing animal remains; — said of rock or soil. Rare.

Zo·ot'o·ca (zō-ŏt'ō-kȧ), n. pl. [NL., fr. Gr. zōiotokos viviparous.] Zool. The mammals, or Vivipara.

zo·ot'o·my (zō-ŏt'ō-mĭ), n. [zoo- + -tomy.] Orig., dissection of animals; now, the science dealing with the anatomy of animals, esp. of animals other than man. — zo'o·tom'ic (zō'ō-tŏm'ĭk), zo'o·tom'i·cal (-ĭ-kăl), adj. — zo'o·tom'i·cal·ly, adv. — zo·ot'o·mist (zō-ŏt'ō-mĭst), n.

zo'o·to'tem·ism (zō'ō-tō'tĕm·ĭz'm), n. Belief in, or use of, animals as totems. Rare.

zo'o·tox'in (-tŏk'sĭn), n. [zoo- + toxin.] A toxin produced by an animal, as snake venom.

zo·ot'ro·phy (zō-ŏt'rō-fĭ), n. [Gr. zōotrophia. See zoo-; -TROPHY.] The rearing or nourishment of animals. — zo'o·troph'ic (zō'ō-trŏf'ĭk), adj.

zo'o·type (zō'ō-tīp), n. [zoo- + -type.] An animal serving as a type; also, the type so represented. — zo'o·typ'ic (-tĭp'ĭk), adj.

zo'o·xan·thel'la (-zăn·thĕl'ȧ), n.; pl. -LAE (-ē). [NL., dim., fr. zoo- + Gr. xanthos yellow.] Biol. One of the minute pigmentary bodies (yellow cells) in certain radiolarians now generally regarded as symbiotic unicellular algae.

zo'o·xan'thin (-zăn'thĭn), n. A yellow oillike pigment found in the feathers of certain birds.

zoo'zoo' (zōō'zōō'), n. [Of imitative origin.] The ringdove. Local, Eng.

Zo'phar (zō'fĭär). Bib. One of Job's three friends.

Zo'phi·el (zō'fĭ·ĕl), n. [Heb. Tsōphī'ēl, an angel, lit., God keeps watch, or scout of God.] In Milton's Paradise Lost, an angel.

zo'pi·lo'te (sō'pē-lō'tā; 267), n. [Sp. zopilote, sopilote, fr. Nahuatl tzopilotl.] The black vulture. Mexico.

‖zop'po (tsŏp'pō), adj. masc., zop'pa (-pä), fem. [It.] Lit., limping; specif., Music, syncopated; hence, alla zoppa, in syncopated style.

Zo'que (sō'kā; 267), n.; pl. ZOQUES (-kās). An Indian of the chief tribe of the Zoquean stock, of the interior of the eastern part of the Isthmus of Tehuantepec. See ZOQUEAN.

Zo'que (sō'kā; 267). Var. of ZAQUE.

Zo'que·an (-ăn), adj. Pertaining to or designating a linguistic family of Mexican Indians, of whom the Zoques and Mixes are the most important, occupying most of the interior and a part of the south coast of the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, in the States of Chiapas, Oaxaca, Tabasco, and Veracruz, and a small outlying area in southern Puebla. They now number about 65,000.

zo'o·gle'a (zō'ō-glē'ȧ), zo'o·gle'al (-ăl). Vars. of ZOOGLOEA, ZOOGLOEAL.

zooks (zōōks), interj. Short for GADZOOKS. See under GAD, God.

zo·ol'o·ger (zō-ŏl'ō-jĕr), n. = ZOOLOGIST. Rare.

Zoo'loo (zōō'lōō). Var. of ZULU.

Zo'om (zō'ŏm). D. Bib.

Zo'o·mas'ti·go'da (zō'ō-măs'tĭ·gō'dȧ), n. pl. [NL.] Zool. Syn. of ZOOMASTIGINA.

zoons (zōōnz), interj. = ZOUNDS. Archaic.

zo'o·phore (zō'ō-fōr), n. A zoozo·op'al·a (zō-ŏp'ăl·ȧ), n. [NL., fr. zo- + -opsia.] = ZOOSCOPY.

zo'o·sper'mi·um (zō'ō-spûr'mĭ·ŭm), n.; pl. -MIA (-ȧ). [NL.] = ZOOSPERM.

zo'o·tech'nics (zō'ō-tĕk'nĭks), n. Also zo'o·tech'nic (-nĭk). = ZOOTECHNY, 1.

zo'o·trope (zō'ō-trōp). Var. of ZOETROPE.

Zo'phah (zō'fȧ). Bib.

Zo'phim (zō'fĭm). Bib.

Zo·rap′ter·a (zō·răp′tĕr·ȧ), n. [NL., fr. Gr. zōros pure, sheer. See APTEROUS.] Zool. An order of insects, including a single genus, Zo′ro·ty′pus (zō′rō·tī′pŭs), widely distributed in the warmer parts of the world. The few species are minute, terrestrial forms, usually apterous, but sometimes winged. They are probably related to the termites.

zor′gite (zôr′gīt), n. [From Zorge, town in Harz Mountains.] Mineral. A lead-gray lead copper selenide. Sp. gr., 7–7.5.

zor′il (zŏr′ĭl), n. [F. zorille, fr. Sp. zorrilla, zorrillo, dim. of zorra, zorro, fox. Cf. ZORILLA.] A South African musteline mammal Ictonyx striata, syn. Zorilla zorilla, about the size and form of the common polecat; — called also Cape polecat. It somewhat resembles the American skunks in color and markings and in secreting an offensive fluid. An allied species (I. frenata) inhabits Egypt.

zo·ril′la (zō·rĭl′ȧ), n. [Sp. zorrilla, zorrillo. See ZORIL.] a The zoril. b [cap.] Syn. of ICTONYX, the genus including the zorils.

Zor′il·li′nae (zŏr′ĭ·lī′nē), n. pl. [NL.] Zool. In some classifications, a subfamily of Mustelidae including the zorils.

zo·ril′lo (zō·rĭl′ō; sō·rē′yō; 170; 267), n. [Sp.] 1. = ZORIL. 2. A tropical American shrub or small tree (Roupala dariensis) family Proteaceae, with offensive skunklike odor, used as a remedy for headache. Central Am.

Zo′ro·as′tri·an (zō′rō·ăs′trĭ·ăn), adj. Of or pertaining to Zoroaster or his religious system; of or pertaining to Zoroastrianism. — n. A follower of Zoroaster; one who accepts Zoroastrianism.

Zo′ro·as′tri·an·ism (-ĭz′m), n. Also Zo′ro·as′trism (-trĭz′m). The religion of Persia previous to the conversion of the Persians to Mohammedanism. It is traditionally derived from its great prophet, Zoroaster or Zarathustra (fl. early in the first millennium B.C.), and its sacred literature is the Zend-Avesta, part of the Avesta being ascribed to Zoroaster. The religion is a dualism, teaching that Ormazd, the lord of light and goodness, carries on a ceaseless war against Ahriman and the hosts of evil spirits who dwell in darkness. Ormazd created man to aid him, and eventually the good kingdom will be attained. See AVESTA, ORMAZD; cf. MAGI; GHEBER; PARSI, 1.

zor·ril′lo (sôr·rē′yō; 170; 267), n. [Dim. of Sp. zorro a fox.] A skunk. Sp. Amer.

zor′ro (sôr′rō; 267), n. [Sp.] 1. A fox; esp., a gray fox of the genus Urocyon. Sp. Amer.
2. A tropical American timber tree (Astronium graveolens), family Anacardiaceae; also, its wood with the color and texture of mahogany.

‖zort·zi′co (zôr·sē′kō), n. [Basque zortziko.] A song or dance in quintuple or sextuple time, common among the Basques.

zos′ter (zŏs′tĕr), n. [L. (in sense 2), fr. Gr. zōstēr, girdle, herpes zoster. See ZONE.] 1. Gr. Costume. A girdle.
2. Med. Herpes zoster; shingles; zona. See SHINGLES.

Zos·te′ra (zŏs·tē′rȧ), n. [NL., fr. Gr. zōstēr a girdle, a kind of seaweed.] Bot. A small genus of widely distributed marine plants, type of the family Zosteraceae, with branching stems, distichous leaves, and monoecious flowers borne in a spadix. Z. marina is the eelgrass, or grass wrack.

Zos′ter·a′ce·ae (zŏs′tĕr·ā′sē·ē), n. pl. [NL.] Bot. A family of two genera of widely distributed marine or aquatic herbs (order Naiadales), the eelgrass family, having submerged, alternate, two-ranked leaves and unisexual flowers without a perianth, the mature carpels nutlike. Cf. ZOSTERA, ELGRASS a.

zos·ter′i·form (zŏs·tĕr′ĭ·fôrm), adj. Med. [zoster + -form.] Resembling shingles (herpes zoster).

Zos′ter·ops (zŏs′tĕr·ŏps), n. [NL., fr. Gr. zōstēr girdle + ōps, ōpos, the eye.] A genus of birds consisting of the white-eyes, typical of a subfamily Zos′ter·o·pi′nae (-ō·pĭ′nē).

Zou·ave′ (zōō·āv′; zōō-; 277), n. [F., fr. Zouaoua, or Zawia, name of a tribe of Kabyles living among the Jurjura Mountains in Algeria.] Mil. a One of a body of infantry in the French service, originally Algerians, but now chiefly Frenchmen. They wear a peculiar and brilliant uniform of gaiters, baggy trousers, short and open-fronted jacket, and, usually, a tasseled cap or turban. Their drill is very quick and spirited and the corps has been noted for dash and valor. b Hence, one of a body of soldiers adopting the dress and drill of the Zouaves, as was done by a number of volunteer regiments in the army of the United States in the Civil War, 1861–65.

Zouave jacket. A short round-fronted jacket, sometimes sleeveless, like that of the Zouave uniform, worn by women.

zounds (zoundz), interj. An abbreviation of God′swounds;—used as a mild oath. Archaic.

zwit′ter (tsvĭt′ĕr), n. [G., hybrid.] Petrog. A variety of greisen containing tin ore.

zyg-. = ZYGO-.

zyg′a·de′nine (zĭg′ȧ·dē′nēn; -nĭn; zī′gȧ-), n. Also -nin. [Zygadenus + 2d -ine, 2 b.] Chem. A crystalline alkaloid, $C_{20}H_{63}NO_{10}$, obtained from the leaves of an herb (Zygadenus intermedius) of the western United States.

Zyg′a·de′nus (-nŭs), n. [NL., fr. Gr. zygadēn jointly, in pairs, fr. zygon yoke.] Bot. A genus of herbs (family Melanthaceae) found in North America and Asia, having basal linear leaves and a terminal panicle of whitish or greenish flowers with a flat spreading perianth. Z. venenosus and other North American species are poisonous to stock. The alkali grass Anticlea elegans was formerly included in this genus. See DEATH CAMASS.

Zy·gae′ni·dae (zĭ·jē′nĭ·dē), n. pl. [NL., fr. Zygaena, type genus (fr. Gr. zygaina hammerheaded shark) + -idae.] Zool. a Syn. of SPHYRNIDAE. b A family of moths, including the foresters, burnet moths, and allied forms. Most of them are bright-colored day-flying species. Zy·gae′na (-nȧ) is the type genus. — zy·gae′nid (-nĭd), n. & adj.

zy′gal (zī′găl), adj. Pertaining to a zygon; H-shaped.

zyg′a·poph′y·sis (zĭg′ȧ·pŏf′ĭ·sĭs; zī′gȧ-), n.; pl. -SES (-sēz). [NL., fr. Gr. zygon yoke + NL. apophysis.] Anat. & Zool. One of the articular processes of the neural arch of a vertebra, of which there are usually four, two anterior and two posterior. — zyg′ap·o·phys′e·al, -i·al (zĭg′ăp·ō·fĭz′ē·ăl; -ĭ·ăl), adj.

zyg′i·on (zĭg′ĭ·ŏn; zĭj′-), n. [NL., fr. zyg- + -ion, Török's common ending for craniometric points.] Cranium. The point at the end of the bizygomatic diameter.

zy′gite (zĭ′jīt), n. [Gr. zygitēs.] See GALLEY, 2.

Zyg·ne′ma (zĭg·nē′mȧ), n. [NL., fr. zyg- + -nema.] Bot. A genus of common filamentous conjugate algae typifying the family Zygnemataceae, having two starlike chromatophores in each cell.

Zyg·ne′ma·ta′ce·ae (zĭg·nē′mȧ·tā′sē·ē), n. pl. [NL.] Bot. A family of common fresh-water algae (Conjugatae) often forming bright-green, slimy masses in stagnant and running water; the pond scums. They consist of simple cylindrical filaments with the green chromatophores in spiral bands or stars or, rarely, straight bands. Reproduction is by conjugation. The best-known genera are Zygnema and Spirogyra. Syn. Zyg′ne·ma′ce·ae (zĭg′nē·mā′sē·ē). — zyg·ne′ma·ta′ceous (zĭg·nē′mȧ·tā′shŭs), adj.

Zyg·ne′ma·ta′les (-lēz), n. pl. [NL. See ZYGNEMA; -ALES.] Bot. An order of Conjugatae typified by the Zygnemataceae. Syn. Zyg′ne·ma′les (zĭg′nē·mā′lēz).

zy′go- (zī′gō-; zĭg′ō-; see note below), zyg-. A combining form, Greek zygo-, zyg-, from zygon, meaning yoke, pair, as in zygodactyl, Zygnema; specif., Biol., zygosis, as in zygospore.
☞ The formerly preferred pronunciation zīg′ō-, which follows the etymology (the Greek y (υ) being short), is yielding to zī′gō-. Cf. DYNA-, HYPO-, PYRO-.

Zy′go·bran′chi·a (zī′gō·brăng′kĭ·ȧ; zĭg′ō-), Zy′go·bran′chi·a′ta (-ā′tȧ), n. pl. [NL., fr. zygo- + -branchia.] Zool. A division of mollusks of the suborder Rhipidoglossa having two ctenidia. — zy′go·branch (zī′gō·brăngk; zĭg′ō-), n. & adj. — zy′go·bran′chi·ate (-brăng′kĭ·ăt), adj. & n.

Zy′go·cac′tus (zī′gō·kăk′tŭs; zĭg′ō-), n. [NL., fr. zygo- + cactus.] Bot. A small genus of Brazilian cacti with flat, usually branched, fleshy joints, showy red or pink flowers, and red fleshy fruits. Z. truncatus is the crab cactus. See EPIPHYLLUM b.

zy′go·dac′tyl, zy′go·dac′tyle (-dăk′tĭl), adj. [zygo- + Gr. daktylos finger, toe.] Yoke-toed; having the toes arranged in pairs, two in front and two behind. — n. A yoke-toed bird, as a woodpecker or parrot.

Zy′go·dac′ty·lae (-tĭ·lē), Zy′go·dac′ty·li (-lī), n. pl. [NL.] Zool. In old classifications, a group of nonpasserine birds consisting of those having zygodactyl feet, now regarded as an unnatural group.

zy′go·dac·tyl′ic (-dăk·tĭl′ĭk), adj. Also zy′go·dac′ty·lous (-dăk′tĭ·lŭs). Zygodactyl; yoke-toed.

zy′go·dac′tyl·ism (-dăk′tĭl·ĭz′m), n. The state of being zygodactyl or of having zygodactyl feet.

zy′go·dont (zī′gō·dŏnt; zĭg′ō-), adj. [zyg- + -odont.] Zool. Having quadritubercular molar teeth in which the tubercles are united in pairs by crests.

zy′go·la′bi·a′lis (-lā′bĭ·ā′lĭs), n. [NL.] Anat. The zygomatic head of the quadratus labii superioris.

zy·go′ma (zĭ·gō′mȧ; zĭ-), n.; pl. -MATA (-mȧ·tȧ). [NL., fr. Gr. zygōma, fr. zygoun to yoke, fr. zygon yoke.] Anat. & Zool. a The whole zygomatic arch. b The zygomatic process of the temporal bone. c The zygomatic bone, or cheekbone.

zy′go·mat′ic (zī′gō·măt′ĭk; zĭg′ō-), adj. Anat. & Zool. Of, pertaining to, designating, or in the region of, the zygoma. — n. The zygomatic bone.

-zy′go·mat′ic. A combining form of zygomatic, as in:

bizygomatic	prezygomatic	squamozygomatic
frontozygomatic	sphenozygomatic	temporozygomatic

zygomatic arch. Anat. The arch of bone which extends along the front or side of the skull beneath the orbit, formed in most mammals by the union of the zygomatic bone with the maxillary bone in front and the zygomatic process of the temporal bone behind. In the lower vertebrates other bones may help to form it, and there may be two arches on each side of the skull, as in some reptiles.

zygomatic bone. Anat. A bone of the side of the face below the eye; the malar bone; — called also cheekbone. In mammals it forms part of the zygomatic arch and part of the orbit, and articulates with the temporal, sphenoid, frontal, and maxillary bones. In birds it is slender and rodlike and joins the maxilla and quadratojugal.

zygomatic fossa. = INFRATEMPORAL FOSSA.

zygomatic muscle. Anat. A slender band of muscle on either side of the face, arising from the zygomatic bone and inserting into the orbicularis oris and skin at the corner of the mouth.

zygomatic nerve. Anat. A branch of the maxillary nerve which divides into two branches, the zygomaticotemporal and zygomaticofacial nerves.

zy′go·mat′i·co- (zī′gō·măt′ĭ·kō-; zĭg′ō-). A combining form for zygomatic, denoting zygomatic and, as in zygomaticotemporal and the following (see AURICULAR, etc.):

zygomaticoauricular	zygomaticomaxillary
zygomaticofacial	zygomaticoorbital
zygomaticofrontal	zygomaticosphenoid

zy′go·mat′i·co·au·ric′u·la′ris (-ō·rĭk′ū·lā′rĭs; 79), n. [NL.] The anterior auricularis muscle. See AURICULARIS.

zy′go·mat′i·co·fa′cial nerve (-fā′shăl). Anat. A branch of the zygomatic nerve which pierces the zygomatic bone to reach the overlying skin of the face.

zy′go·mat′i·co·tem′po·ral (-tĕm′pō·răl), adj. Anat. a Of, pertaining to, or uniting, the zygomatic arch and the temporal bone; as, the zygomaticotemporal suture. b Of, pertaining to, or designating, a foramen in the zygomatic bone, and the nerve passing through it, a branch of the zygomatic nerve, for the skin of the face above the zygoma.

zygomatic process. Anat. a A long, slender process of the temporal or squamosal bone helping to form the zygomatic arch. b A process of the zygomatic bone articulating with the temporal bone. c A narrow process of the frontal bone articulating with the zygomatic bone. d A broad, rough process of the maxilla articulating with the zygomatic bone.

zygomatic suture. Anat. The zygomaticotemporal suture.

zy'go·mat'i·cum (zī'gō·măt'ĭ·kŭm; zĭg'ō-), n. [NL.] Anat. & Zool. a The zygomatic bone. b In fishes, the suborbital.

zy'go·mat'i·cus (-kŭs), n. [NL.] Anat. The zygomatic muscle; — called more fully zygomaticus major, to distinguish it from the zygomaticus minor, or zygomatic head of the quadratus labii superioris.

zy'go·max'il·lar'y point (zī'gō·măk'sĭ·lĕr'ĭ or, esp. Brit., -măk·sĭl'ə·rĭ; zĭg'ō-). Craniom. The point marked by the lower end of the zygomaticotemporal suture.

zy'go·mor'phic (-môr'fĭk), adj. [zygo- + -morphic.] Biol. Symmetrical bilaterally; — said of organisms, organs, or parts, capable of division into two symmetrical halves only by a single longitudinal plane passing through the axis; — called also monosymmetric. Cf. ACTINOMORPHIC. — zy'go·mor'phism (-fĭz'm), n.

zy'go·mor'phous (-fŭs), adj. Biol. Zygomorphic.

zy'go·my·cete' (-mī·sēt'), n.; pl. -MYCETES (-mī·sēts'). A plant of the subclass Zygomycetes.

Zy'go·my·ce'tes (-mī·sē'tēz), n. pl. [NL., fr. zygo- + -mycetes.] Bot. One of the two subclasses into which the algal fungi (class Phycomycetes) are divided, including those in which reproduction is by conjugation resulting in production of zygospores. It embraces the orders Mucorales and Entomophthorales. Cf. OÖMYCETES. — zy'go·my·ce'tous (-tŭs), adj.

zy'gon (zī'gŏn; zĭg'ŏn), n.; pl. -GA (-gə; -ə). [NL., fr. Gr. zygon yoke, crossbar.] 1. Gr. Antiq. In naval construction, a bench for rowers; a thwart.
2. Anat. An H-shaped fissure of the brain, or, more strictly, the fissure representing the crossbar of the H.

zy'go·neure (zī'gō·nūr; zĭg'ō-), n. [zygo- + -neure.] Anat. A connecting neuron.

zy'go·phore (zī'gō·fōr; zĭg'ō-), n. [zygo- + -phore.] Bot. A specialized hyphal branch giving rise to another that forms the gamete in certain molds (family Mucoraceae). — zy'go·phor'ic (-fŏr'ĭk), adj.

Zy'go·phy'ce·ae (-fī'sē·ē; -fĭs'ē-ē), n. pl. [NL., fr. zygo- + Gr. phykos seaweed.] Bot. In some, esp. older, classifications, a class of greenish unicellular or filamentous algae having conspicuous chromatophores, and multiplying by simple division and by conjugation. It includes the desmids and pond scums (Conjugatae) and usually also the diatoms. — zy'go·phy'ceous (-fĭsh'ŭs), adj.

Zy'go·phyl·la'ce·ae (-fĭ·lā'sē-ē), n. pl. [NL.] Bot. A family of herbs, shrubs, or trees (order Geraniales), the bean-caper family, distinguished by pinnate or bifoliolate stipulate leaves and axillary pentamerous flowers. There are about 20 genera and over 160 species. See ZYGOPHYLLUM; GUAIACUM, 1; TRIBULUS. — zy'go·phyl·la'ceous (-shŭs), adj.

Zy'go·phyl'lum (zī'gō·fĭl'ŭm; zĭg'ō-), n. [NL., fr. zygo- + Gr. phyllon leaf; — in allusion to the opposite leaflets.] Bot. A large genus of shrubs, the bean capers, typifying the Zygophyllaceae, distinguished mainly by the opposite bifoliolate leaves. The species are natives of the Old World.

zy'go·phyte (zī'gō·fīt; zĭg'ō-), n. [zygo- + -phyte.] Bot. A plant in which reproduction consists in the union of two similar cells. Cf. OÖPHYTE.

zy'go·pleu'ral (-plōōr'əl; 242), adj. [zygo- + Gr. pleura side.] Biol. Bilaterally symmetrical.

Zy·gop'ter·a (zĭ·gŏp'tĕr·ə), n. pl. [NL., fr. zygo- + -ptera.] Zool. A suborder of Odonata, including the damsel flies, having long narrow body and narrow, equal wings, held upright in repose. The aquatic nymphs have a pair of paddle-shaped tracheal gills at the apex of the abdomen. Cf. ANISOPTERA. — zy·gop'ter·an (-ăn), adj. & n. — zy·gop'ter·on (-ŏn), n. — zy·gop'ter·ous (-ŭs), adj.

Zy·gop'ter·a'ce·ae (-ā'sē-ē), n. pl. [NL., fr. Zygopteris. See ZYGOPTERA.] Paleontol. A family of about fifteen genera of primitive Paleozoic ferns found in Europe and the United States, characterized by the peculiar structure and forking of the petioles. Zy·gop'ter·is (zĭ·gŏp'tĕr·ĭs) is a typical genus. — zy·gop'ter·id (-ĭd), n.

Zy'go·sac'cha·ro·my'ces (zī'gō·săk'ə·rō·mī'sēz; zĭg'ō-), n. [NL., fr. zygo- + Saccharomyces.] Bot. A genus of the yeasts (family Saccharomycetaceae) in which ascospore formation is preceded by conjugation.

zy'gose (zī'gōs; zĭg'ōs; cf. -OSE), adj. Bot. Pertaining to zygosis or conjugation.

zy·go'sis (zĭ·gō'sĭs; zĭ-), n. [NL., fr. Gr. zygōsis a balancing, fr. zygon yoke.] Bot. & Zool. = CONJUGATION, 3.

-zy·go'sis. [NL.] A combining form of zygosis, as in heterozygosis, homozygosis.

zy'go·sperm (zī'gō·spûrm; zĭg'ō-), n. [zygo- + sperm.] Bot. A zygospore.

zy'go·sphene (-sfēn), n. [zygo- + Gr. sphēn a wedge.] Zool. A median process on the front part of the neural arch of the vertebrae of most snakes and some lizards, which fits into a fossa, the zy·gan'trum (zĭ·găn'trŭm; zĭ-), on the back of the arch in front. — zy'go·sphe'nal (zī'gō·sfē'nəl; zĭg'ō-), adj.

zy'go·sphere (zī'gō·sfēr; zĭg'ō-), n. [zygo- + -sphere.] Bot. A gamete capable of uniting with a similar one to form a zygospore.

zy'go·spo·ran'gi·um (-spō·răn'jĭ·ŭm), n.; pl. -GIA (-ə). Also zy'go·spo·range' (zī'gō·spō·rănj'; zĭg'ō-); pl. -RANGES (-răn'jēz; -jĭz; 119). [NL. zygosporangium.] Bot. A sporangium in which zygospores are produced.

zy'go·spore (zī'gō·spōr; zĭg'ō-; 181), n. [zygo- + spore.] Bot. A spore formed by conjugation of two similar gametes or sexual cells; — opposed to oöspore. Zygospores are commonly produced among the conjugate algae (class Zygophyceae) and the parallel group of fungi (Zygomycetes), and commonly serve as resting spores. — zy'go·spor'ic (-spŏr'ĭk), adj.

zy'go·spo'ro·phore (-spō'rō·fōr; 181), n. A zygophore.

zy'go·style (zī'gō·stīl; zĭg'ō-), n. [zygo- + -style.] Anat. The terminal caudal vertebra.

zy'go·tax'is (-tăk'sĭs), n. [NL., fr. zygo- + -taxis.] Plant Physiol. The attraction between two zygophores, or between two suspensors, causing conjugation. — zy'go·tac'tic (-tăk'tĭk), adj.

zy'gote (zī'gōt; zĭg'ōt), n. [Gr. zygōtos yoked. See ZYGOMA.] Biol. a A cell formed by the union of two gametes; a fertilized egg; a zygospore. b Hence, the individual developing from such a cell. See GAMETE. — zy·got'ic (zĭ·gŏt'ĭk; zĭ-), adj.

-zy'gote. A combining form of zygote, as in het'er·o·zy'gote, ho'mo·zy'gote.

zy'go·tene (zī'gō·tēn; zĭg'ō-), adj. [zygo- + -tene.] Biol. Amphitene.

zy'go·to- (zī'gō·tō-; zĭg'ō-). A combining form for zygote, as in zy'go·to·blast', zy'go·to·mere'. See -BLAST, -MERE.

zy'go·toid (-toid), n. [zygote + -oid.] Bot. A multinucleate zygospore.

zy'gous (zī'gŭs), adj. [From Gr. zygon yoke.] Paleontol. Paired; — noting symmetrically placed structures on opposite sides of the mesial plane.

-zygous. Biol. A combining form, Greek -zygos, yoked, from zygon, a yoke, denoting linked, formed by gametes, as in heterozygous.

zy'go·zo'o·spore (zī'gō·zō'ō·spōr; zĭg'ō-), n. [zygo- + zoospore.] Bot. A motile zygospore.

zy'mase (zī'māz), n. [From ZYME.] Biochem. Any of a group of enzymes which, in the presence of oxygen, convert glucose and a few other carbohydrates into carbon dioxide and water or, in the absence of oxygen, into alcohol and carbon dioxide or into lactic acid. These enzymes were originally found in yeasts and bacteria and are also present in higher plants and animals. Zymase may be separated into two parts by filtration or dialysis: cozymase, a coenzyme, and apozymase, the remaining colloidal, thermolabile portion. Fermentation requires the presence of the two parts.

zyme (zīm), n. [Gr. zymē leaven.] A ferment, as, Med., the morbific principle of a zymotic disease.

-zyme. Biochem. A combining form for enzyme, as in:

cacozyme	erythrozyme	microzyme
cytozyme	histozyme	serozyme

zy'mic (zī'mĭk; zĭm'ĭk), adj. Old Chem. Pertaining to, or due to, fermentation; as, zymic acid (lactic acid).

zym'ite (zĭm'īt), n. [Gr. zymē leaven.] Eccl. Hist. One who administers or receives the Eucharist with leavened bread, as in the Eastern Church; — opposed to azymite.

zy'mo- (zī'mō-), zym-. A combining form from Greek zymē, leaven, denoting connection with, or relation to, a ferment or fermentation, as in zymology, zymase, zy'mophyte, zy'mo·tech'ny.

zy'mo·gen (zī'mō·jĕn), zy'mo·gene (-jēn), n. [F. zymogène.] 1. Biol. Any microorganism deriving energy chiefly from zymase fermentation of carbohydrates; a zymogenic organism, as certain yeasts or the lactic bacteria.
2. Biochem. The inactive form of an enzyme; — called also proenzyme. In the presence of an activator, called a kinase, it is changed to the active enzyme.

zy'mo·gen'e·sis (zī'mō·jĕn'ē·sĭs), n. [NL. See ZYMO-; -GENESIS.] Biochem. Transformation of a zymogen into an enzyme.

zy'mo·gen'ic (-ĭk), adj. 1. Producing fermentation.
2. Of or pertaining to a zymogen.

zymogenic organism. Biol. Any microorganism, as certain yeasts or many bacteria, which sets up fermentative processes giving constant chemical products. Cf. FERMENTATION, 3; ZYMOGEN, 1.

zy·mog'e·nous (zĭ·mŏj'ē·nŭs), adj. Zymogenic (sense 1).

zy'moid (zī'moid), adj. [zym- + -oid.] Like, or with the properties of, a ferment, or zyme.

zy·mol'o·gy (zĭ·mŏl'ō·jĭ), n. [zymo- + -logy.] The science of or a treatise on fermentation. — zy'mo·log'ic (zī'mō·lŏj'ĭk), zy'mo·log'i·cal (-ĭ·kəl), adj. — zy·mol'ogist (zĭ·mŏl'ō·jĭst), n.

zy·mol'y·sis (zĭ·mŏl'ĭ·sĭs), n. [NL., fr. zymo- + -lysis.] Biochem. Action of enzymes; also, the changes produced by such action; enzymolysis. — zy'mo·lyt'ic (zī'mō·lĭt'ĭk), adj.

zy'mome (zī'mōm), n. Also zy·mo'min (zĭ·mō'mĭn). [Gr. zymōma a fermented mixture.] Old Chem. Glutenin.

zy·mom'e·ter (zĭ·mŏm'ē·tĕr), n. [zymo- + -meter.] An instrument for measuring fermentation; a zymosimeter. Cf. ZYMOSCOPE.

zy'mo·phore (zī'mō·fōr; 181), adj. Also zy'mo·phor'ic (-fŏr'ĭk). [zymo- + -phore.] Toxophorous. See SIDE-CHAIN THEORY.

zy'mo·phos'phate (-fŏs'fāt), n. [zymo- + phosphate.] Biochem. A hexosephosphoric acid found in yeast.

zy'mo·plas'tic (-plăs'tĭk), adj. [zymo- + -plastic.] Biochem. Pertaining to or designating certain substances which, not themselves enzymes or zymogens, are believed to participate in the formation of enzymes.

zy'mo·scope (zī'mō·skōp), n. [zymo- + -scope.] Biochem. An apparatus for determining the fermenting power of yeast by measuring the amount of carbon dioxide evolved from a given quantity of sugar.

zy'mo·sim'e·ter (-sĭm'ē·tĕr), n. [Gr. zymōsis fermentation + -meter.] = ZYMOMETER.

zy·mo'sis (zī·mō'sĭs), n. [NL., fr. Gr. zymōsis fermentation, fr. zymē ferment.] a Fermentation; hence, Med., an analogous process by which an infectious disease is believed to be developed. b Rare. A zymotic disease.

zy·mos'ter·ol (zĭ·mŏs'tĕr·ōl; -ŏl), n. [zymo- + sterol.] Biochem. A white crystalline sterol obtained from yeast fat. It is closely related to ergosterol.

zy'mos·then'ic (zĭ'mŏs·thĕn'ĭk), adj. [zymo- + -sthenic.] Biochem. Pertaining to or designating an agent that strengthens the activity of an enzyme.

zy'mo·tech'nics (zī'mō·tĕk'nĭks), n. [zymo- + technics.] Art of inducing and applying fermentation for technical uses. See -ICS. — zy'mo·tech'nic (-nĭk), adj. — zy'mo·tech'ni·cal (-nĭ·kəl), adj.

zy·mot'ic (zĭ·mŏt'ĭk), adj. [Gr. zymōtikos causing to ferment, fr. zymoun to ferment, fr. zymē ferment, leaven.] 1. Of, pertaining to, causing, or caused by, fermentation.
2. Med. Designating, pertaining to, or causing any infectious or contagious disease.
— zy·mot'i·cal·ly (-ĭ·kəl·ĭ), adv.

zy·mot'ic, n. Med. A zymotic disease.

zy'mur·gy (zī'mûr·jĭ), n. [zym- + -urgy.] That branch of applied chemistry which has to do with fermentation processes, as in wine making, brewing, etc.

Zyth'i·a (zĭth'ĭ·ə), n. [NL. See ZYTHUM.] Bot. A genus of imperfect fungi (family Nectrioidaceae) characterized by white or bright-colored, fleshy or waxy pycnidia and hyaline, continuous spores. Z. fragariae occurs on strawberry.

zy'thum (zī'thŭm), n. [L., fr. Gr. zythos.] Rom. Antiq. A kind of beer; specif.: a The beer of ancient Egypt. b The beer of the northern peoples.

Zy'zo·mys (zī'zō·mĭs; zĭz'ō-), n. [NL., for Zygomys, fr. zygo- + -mys.] A genus of small Australian rodents of the family Muridae, characterized externally by the short, rounded ears and long, slightly tufted tail, which is usually all white, and by the upper molar teeth, in which the outermost of the usual three tubercles, constituting the crescrests, is practically absent.

Zyz'zo·ge'ton (zĭz'ō·jē'tŏn), n. [NL., fr. Zyzza (prob. fr. Sp. ziszás zigzag), an earlier genus + Gr. geitōn neighbor.] Zool. A genus of large South American leaf hoppers (family Cicadellidae), having the pronotum tuberculate and the front tibiae grooved.

zy'go·max'il·la're (zī'gō·măk'sĭ·lā'rē; zĭg'ō-; 79), n. [NL.] = ZYGOMAXILLARY POINT.
zy'go·max'il·lar'y (-măk'sĭ·lĕr'ĭ; -măk·sĭl'ə·rĭ), adj. = ZYGOMATICOMAXILLARY.
Zy'gop·ter'i·des (zī'gŏp·tĕr'ĭ·dēz; zĭg'ŏp-), n. pl. [NL.] Zool. Syn. of ZYGOPTERA.
zym-. = ZYMO-.
zy'min (zī'mĭn), n. & = ZYME.
b = PANCREATIN b.
zy'mo·tize (zī'mō·tīz), v. t. See -IZE; ZYMOTIC. zy'mo·tox'ic (zī'mō·tŏk'sĭk), adj. [See ZYMO-; TOXIC.] See SIDE-CHAIN THEORY; — used in the phrase zymotoxic group.
Zy·re'ni·an (zĭ·rē'nĭ·ăn). Var. of SYRYENIAN.
Zyr'i·an, Zyr'y·an (zĭr'ĭ·ăn). Vars. of SYRYENIAN.
zy'them (zī'thĕm). Var. of ZYTHUM.

ABBREVIATIONS

The following abbreviations are those generally used in American and British printed literature. In recent usage there has been a strong tendency to omit the period with certain classes of abbreviations, but good use still demands it in most cases. See also Arbitrary Signs and Symbols, in Appendix; Abbreviations used in this Dictionary, preceding Vocabulary.

A, argon (Chem.); a Fraunhofer line caused by terrestrial oxygen (Astrophysics).
A., Alfred, Anna, and other personal names; Absolute (temperature); Absolvo (L., I absolve); Academy; Academician; America; American; Antiquo (L., [for the] old [law]), used on Roman ballots to signify a negative vote; April; Aulus. — or a., arteria; artillery.
Ā, Anna. Cataloguing.
A, Augustus. Cataloguing.
A, a, Augusta. Cataloguing.
A., Å., angstrom unit. Physics.
a., about; accepted (Com.); acre, or acres; acting; active; adjective; after; afternoon; aged; alto; amateur; ampere; ana- (Chem.); anno (L., in the year); annus (L., year); anode; anonymous; answer; ante; approved (Com.); are (Metric System); area; argent (Her.); assists; at.

AERONAUTICS

g Acceleration due to gravity.
V Air speed.
V_i Air speed, indicated.
h Altitude.
α Angle of attack.
ϵ Angle of downwash.
θ Angle of pitch.
φ Angle of roll or bank.
δ Angle of set of control surfaces (with appropriate subscripts for different surfaces).
β Angle of stabilizer setting with reference to lower wing.
i_t Angle of stabilizer setting with reference to thrust line.
i_w Angle of wing setting (angle between the wing chord and the thrust line).
ψ Angle of yaw.
ω Angular velocity.
S Area, general.
S_w Area of wings. Areas of other parts are similarly indicated by appropriate subscripts.

Axes of aircraft (left-handed):
X Longitudinal. See AXIS, 5.
Y Lateral. See AXIS, 5.
Z Normal. See AXIS, 5.

H Ceiling.
c.g. Center of gravity.
C_g Center-of-gravity coefficient (with respect to the mean chord).
c.p. Center of pressure.
C_p Center-of-pressure coefficient, that is, the ratio of the distance of the center of pressure from the leading edge to the chord length.
c Chord length.
r Climb, rate of.
C Coefficient, absolute; — usually with subscript.

For special coefficients, see Center-of-gravity coefficient, above; Center-of-pressure coefficient, above; Damping coefficient, Drag, Force, Lift, Moments, Power coefficients, Thrust coefficients, Torque coefficients, Viscosity, below.

λ Damping coefficient.
ρ Density, air (mass per unit volume).
σ Density, relative to standard air density.
γ Dihedral.

Displacements:
x Longitudinal.
y Lateral.
z Normal.
Angular:
ϕ In roll.
θ In pitch.
ψ In yaw.

f Distance from center of gravity to center of pressure of horizontal tail surface.
D Drag.
C_D Drag, absolute coefficient of.
C_{Di} Drag, coefficient of induced.
C_{Dp} Drag, coefficient of parasite (structural resistance). See DRAG, n., 11.
C_{Do} Drag, coefficient of profile.
D_i Drag, induced.
D_p Drag, parasite (structural resistance).
D_o Drag, profile.
q Dynamic (or impact) pressure, $\frac{1}{2}\rho V^2$.
η Efficiency.
F Force.
C Force, cross-wind.
C_o Force, cross-wind, absolute coefficient.

Forces (parallel to axes):
X Longitudinal.
Y Lateral.
Z Normal.

G Gap.
h Height.
Φ Helix angle, effective.
HP Horsepower.
V' Indraft (inflow velocity).
ν Kinematic viscosity.
l Length, or linear dimension.
L Lift.
C_L, Lift, absolute coefficient of.
n Load factor.
w Loading, specific (with appropriate subscripts for different surfaces).
w_p Loading, power; weight per unit power.
w_s Loading, wing; weight per unit area.
λ Logarithmic increment or decrement of amplitude.
m Mass.

Moments:
L Rolling.
M Pitching.
N Yawing.

Moments, absolute coefficients of:
C_L; Rolling.
C_M Pitching.
C_N Yawing.

Moments of inertia about axes:
A Longitudinal.
B Lateral.
C Normal.

p Pitch, usually with a subscript.
p_a Pitch, aerodynamic.
p_e Pitch, effective.

Many other kinds of pitch are similarly indicated by appropriate subscripts.

P Power.
C_P, C_P', C_P'' Power coefficients.
p Pressure, general.
D Propeller diameter.
η (formerly π). Propeller efficiency.
N Propeller rate of rotation.
K Radius of gyration.
^xA Radius of gyration about the longitudinal axis.
^xB Radius of gyration about the lateral axis.
^xC Radius of gyration about the normal axis.
R Resultant force.
n Revolutions per second.
N Revolutions per minute.
V_s Slip-stream velocity.
b Span.
V Speed.
D_p Structural resistance (parasite drag.)
T Thrust.
C_T, C_T', C_T'' Thrust coefficients.

Q Torque.
C_Q, C_Q', C_Q'' Torque coefficients.

V Velocities: Angular:
p Roll.
q Pitch.
r Yaw.
Linear (component along axis):
u Roll.
v Pitch.
w Yaw.

μ Viscosity, coefficient of.
W Weight.

ASTRONOMY

Astronomical symbols below are grouped according to meaning. Note that the same symbol may have various meanings, depending partly upon the context in which it occurs. Thus, ☉ may mean that two heavenly bodies differ 72° in right ascension, or it may signify the longitude of the sun, or simply the sun without reference to longitude. Similarly, ☽ may mean the moon in the first quarter, or the moon's longitude, or simply the moon.

1. SUN, MOON, AND STARS

☉ or ☸ The Sun; Sunday.
☄ Comet.
✻ or ✻ Fixed Star.
◍, ☾, or ☽ The Moon; Monday.
● New Moon.
☽, ◍, ◑, or ☽ First Quarter.
○ or ☺ Full Moon.
☾, ◍, ☾, or ☾ Last Quarter.

NOTE. — The sign ☉ originally represented a buckler with its boss, an emblem of the sun.

2. PLANETS

♀ Venus; Friday.
⊕, ⊖, or ♁ The Earth.
♂ Mars; Tuesday.
♃ Jupiter; Thursday.
♄ or ♄ Saturn; Saturday.
♅, ♅, or ♅ Uranus.
♆, ♆, or ♆ Neptune.
♇ Pluto.

NOTE. — It is believed that these symbols at first represented: ☿, the caduceus of Mercury, or, according to some, his head and winged cap; ♀ a looking glass, an attribute of Venus; ⊖, the earth and its equator; ⊕, the same, with the addition of a meridian line, or, as some think, the four quarters of the globe; ♂, the globe and cross placed in the hands of sovereigns as a symbol of power or dominion; ♂, the head, helmet, and nodding plume of a warrior, or, more probably, a shield and spear, the two chief instruments of ancient warfare; ♃, a rude and hieroglyphical representation of an eagle — the "bird of Jove" — with expanded wings, or the initial letter of Ζεύς (Zeus), with a line drawn through it as a mark of abbreviation; ♄, an ancient scythe or sickle, the emblem of Saturn, the god of time; ♅, the initial letter of Herschel, the discoverer of Uranus, with a planet suspended from the crossbar. ♁ is a sign made up of that for the sun (☉), and a part of that for Mars (♂). (Among the old chemists, gold was symbolically represented by the sign ☉, and iron by ♂. When Uranus was discovered, the German astronomers invented the sign ♁ to denote not only the new planet, but also the then recently discovered metal platinum, which was at that time called white gold, and which, in its native state, is almost always combined with iron.) ♆, a trident is the emblem of Neptune, the god of the sea. ♇ is simply a monogram made up of P and L, the first two letters of Pluto.

(b) ASTEROIDS, or MINOR PLANETS

Modern Symbol	Old Symbol	Name	Modern Symbol	Old Symbol	Name
①	☉ or ☾	Ceres	③	☿ or ✻	Juno
②	♀ or ♀	Pallas	④	♇ or ♇	Vesta

Signs devised for other asteroids have never been much used, and all are now usually designated by numbers within circles. See ASTEROID, in the Vocabulary.

3. SIGNS OF THE ZODIAC

Spring Signs:
1. ♈ Aries, the Ram.
2. ♉ Taurus, the Bull.
3. ♊, ♊, or ♊ Gemini, the Twins.

Summer Signs:
4. ♋ or ♋ Cancer, the Crab.
5. ♌ Leo, the Lion.
6. ♍ or ♍. Virgo, the Virgin.

Autumn Signs:
7. ♎ Libra, the Balance.
8. ♏ Scorpio, the Scorpion.
9. ♐ or ♐ Sagittarius, the Archer.

Winter Signs:
10. ♑ or ♑ Capricorn, the Goat.
11. ♒ or ♒ Aquarius, the Water Bearer.
12. ♓ or ♓ Pisces, the Fishes.

NOTE. — The sign ♈ represents the horns of a ram; ♉, the head and horns of a bull; ♊, the ancient statues of Castor and Pollux, which consisted of two pieces of wood joined together by two crosspieces; ♋, the claws of a crab; ♌, a corruption of the Greek letter Λ, the initial of Λέων (Leōn), a lion, or, less probably, a representation of a lion's tail; ♍, a corruption of παρ (par) for παρθένος (parthenos), the Greek word for virgin; ♎, a rude picture of a balance; ♏, the legs and tail of a scorpion, or, according to some, the tail only, including the sting and two or three of the joints nearest to it; ♐, an arrow just leaving the bow, of which a small portion is to be seen at the bottom of the character; ♑, a ligature combining the letters τρ (tr) of the Greek word τράγος (tragos), a goat; ♒, waves of water; ♓, two fish tied together with a string.

4. ASPECTS AND NODES

☌ Conjunction; — indicating that the bodies have the same longitude, or right ascension; as, ☿ ☌ ☉; that is, Mercury is in conjunction with the sun.
✻ Sextile; — indicating a difference of 60° in longitude, or right ascension.
☾, ☾, or ☉ Quintile; — indicating a difference of 72° in longitude, or right ascension. Rare.
□ Quadrature; — indicating a difference of 90° in longitude, or right ascension.
△ Trine; — indicating a difference of 120° in longitude, or right ascension.
☍ Opposition; — indicating a difference of 180° in longitude, or right ascension; as, ♂ ☍ ☉, opposition of Neptune to the sun.
☊ Ascending Node; — called also dragon's head. See DRAGON'S HEAD, 2, in Vocabulary.
☋ Descending Node; — called also dragon's tail. See DRAGON'S TAIL, 1, in Vocabulary.

NOTE. — In the sign ♂, the circle represents the zodiac, or the heavens, and the little mark at the top the meeting of two bodies in the same point or place; in the sign ☍, the circles touch at points opposite to each other, or 180 degrees apart; the signs ✻, □, △, are symbolical of the derivation of the words sextile, quadrature, trine, from the Latin words sex, six, quattuor, four, tres, three, being figures composed of six, of four, and of three lines respectively: the signs ☊ and ☋ represent a dragon, and originated in the fancy of the ancient astronomers, who saw in the deviation from the ecliptic made by a planet in passing from one node to another a figure like that of a dragon, the belly being where the planet has the greatest latitude, and the head and tail the points of intersection with the ecliptic.

5. SIGNS OF POSITION

⊙ Sun's upper limb.
⊚ Sun's lower limb.
☾ Moon's upper limb.
☾ Moon's lower limb.
⊠ Station mark.

6. SIGNS AND ABBREVIATIONS USED IN NOTATION ɑb, a, or α. Mean distance.

R.A., ℛ, a, α, or A.R. Right ascension. β Celestial latitude.
D. Diameter.
δ Declination.
△ Distance.
E. East.
e Eccentricity.
h. or ʰ Hours; as, 6h., or 6ʰ.
i Inclination; especially, inclination to the ecliptic.
L, l, or ε Mean longitude in orbit.
λ Longitude.
M. Mass.
m. or ᵐ Minutes of time; as, 6m., or 6ᵐ.
μ or n Mean angular motion in unit of time.
+ or N. North.
N.P.D. North polar distance.
ν, Ω, or L. Longitude of ascending node.
π or ϖ Longitude of perihelion.
q. Perihelion distance.
ρ or R. Radius or radius vector.
— or S. South.
s. or ˢ Seconds of time; as, 10s., or 10ˢ.
T. Time; periodic time.
W. West.
φ (a) Angle of eccentricity, or the angle whose sine is equal to e. (b) Geographical latitude.
° Degrees.
′ Minutes of arc.
″ Seconds of arc.
☉ Sun's longitude.
☽ or ☽ Moon's longitude.

STARS

The visible stars are designated by a Greek or Roman letter, or a numeral, followed by the Latin genitive of the constellation name; as, β Librae. The letters correspond roughly to the order of brightness within the constellation, the brightest being known as α, the second brightest as β, etc., and the twenty-fourth in brightness as ω. See ALPHABET, Table, p. 75. Many fainter stars are known only by the numbers given them in one of the catalogues of stars. See STAR.

BIOLOGY AND BOTANY

♀ Female; hence, a female organism, cell, or organ; a pistillate, fertile, or female flower; also, a plant bearing such flowers.
○ An individual, specif., a female; — used chiefly in inheritance charts.
♂ or ♂ Male; hence, a male organism, cell, or organ; a staminate or male flower; also, a plant bearing such flowers.
□ An individual, specif., a male; — used chiefly in inheritance charts.
× Crossed with; — the sign of a hybrid.
P Parental; — used in genetics to designate the generation from which the calculations start.
F Filial; offspring.
F_1 Offspring of the first generation.
F_2 Offspring of the second generation.
F_3, F_4, F_5, etc. Offspring of the third, fourth, fifth, etc., generation.
+ Occurrence of a particular trait, characteristic, or phenomenon.
— Absence of a particular trait, characteristic, or phenomenon.

NOTE. — In Mendelian inheritance diagrams, specific traits or the inheritance factors determining them are often represented by one-letter abbreviations; as, C for colored, S for spotted, etc. Dominant traits are usually represented by capitals, and recessive by small letters. A combination of a capital and a small letter indicates that the individual displays the dominant trait but may transmit the recessive to some of his offspring.

○, ⊙, ①, or ⊙ An annual plant.
③, ♂, ⊙⊙, or ⊙ A biennial plant.
♃ A perennial herb.
△ An evergreen plant.
⊙ A monocarpic plant; that is, a plant, whether annual or biennial, that flowers but once.
♄ A tree or shrub.
♄ or 5 An undershrub, or suffruticose plant.
♄ A shrub.
5 A large shrub, almost a tree.
♄ or 5 A tree.
⊙ A monocarpous perennial plant.
G̲ Superior ovary.
G̅ Inferior ovary.
⊕ Actinomorphic.
·|· Zygomorphic.
☿ A perfect or monoclinous flower; also, a plant bearing such flowers.
♂♀ Diclinous; that is, having the male and female flowers separate.
♂—♀ Monoecious; that is, having male and female flowers on the same plant.
♂:♀ Dioecious; that is, having male and female flowers on different plants.
♀♂♀ Polygamous; that is, having hermaphrodite, or perfect, and unisexual flowers on the same or different plants.
⌒ A climbing plant.
) Turning or winding to the left.
(Turning or winding to the right.
○ = Having the cotyledons accumbent, and the radicle lateral.
○|| Having the cotyledons incumbent, and the radicle dorsal.
○ », or ○ ⚥ Having the cotyledons conduplicate, and the radicle dorsal.
○ || || Having the cotyledons folded twice, and the radicle dorsal.
○ || || || Having the cotyledons folded thrice, and the radicle dorsal.
§ A section of a species or genus.
± Northern Hemisphere.
∓ Southern Hemisphere.
|✱ Old World.
✱| New World.
∞ or 00 An indefinite number; when applied to stamens, more than twenty.
0 Wanting; none; indicating the absence of a part.
° Feet.
′ Inches. ″ Lines.

NOTE. — With European writers, the usual signs for feet, inches, and lines are respectively ′, ″, and ‴.

? indicates doubt or uncertainty respecting that to which it is affixed or prefixed; — applied to the names of genera or species, of localities, of authors cited, and the like.
* indicates, when appended to a reference, that a good description is to be found at the place referred to. Rare.
† indicates doubt or uncertainty; the same as ?. Rare.

Origins. The symbols which are not letters, punctuation marks, or mathematical signs, are sometimes schematic pictures of the thing or phenomenon symbolized; as,) turning to the left; △ an evergreen plant, probably either from the frequent conical shape of such plants or from the roughly triangular cross section of some pine needles. Others have been adopted chiefly from astronomy; as, ♀ female, from Venus's looking glass; ♂ male, the shield and spear of Mars (or perhaps his helmet and plume); ⊙ or ⊙, an annual plant, the sun. For full explanation, see under Astronomy, above.

BOOKS

Fold Symbol	Name	Leaves to a Sheet	Pages to a Sheet	Size Symbol
f°	Folio	2	4	F
4to or 4°	Quarto	4	8	Q
8vo or 8°	Octavo	8	16	O
12mo or 12°	Duodecimo	12	24	D
16mo or 16°	Sextodecimo	16	32	S
18mo or 18°	Octodecimo	18	36	E
24mo or 24°	Twenty-fourmo	24	48	T
32mo or 32°	Thirty-twomo	32	64	Tt
48mo or 48°	Forty-eightmo	48	96	Fe

For the usual dimensions of the above books, see the names in the Vocabulary. Books having more than 48 leaves to a sheet are rare, but are designated similarly; as, 64mo or 64°; 72mo or 72°. For folios higher than 35 cm., superior figures are added to F to show in which height bracket the book belongs; as, F⁴ for 35–40 cm.; F⁵ for 40–50 cm.; F⁶ for 70–80 cm. Actual dimensions are now frequently given; as, 40 h, meaning 40 centimeters in height; 23 × 14, meaning 23 centimeters high and 14 centimeters wide.

For the symbols used in designating certain important manuscripts, see CODEX SEPTUAGINT, etc., in the Vocabulary.

BUSINESS AND COMMERCE

NOTE. — See also Money, Mathematics, Miscellaneous, Ships and Shipping, below. For weights, measures, etc., see under Physics, Engineering, Weights, and Measures, below.

@ At or to; as, silk @ $2 per yd.; flour per bbl. $8 @ $10.50.
A 1 or A No. 1. First-class; absolutely reliable; — originally applied to ships.
ᵃ/ₑ Account; as, J. Smith in ᵃ/ₑ with J. Jones.
ᵇ/ₐ or B/D Brought down.
ᵇ/ᶠ or B/F Brought forward.
B/L Bill of lading.
ᶜ/ₐ or C/D Carried down.
ᶜ/ᶠ or C/F Carried forward.
ᶜ/ₒ Care of; also, carried over.
℔ Pound, or pounds.
L/C Letter of credit.
℗ Per; as, sheep $4 ℗ head.
% Per cent; as, discount 6% = $10.21. Also, order of.
XX Ale of double strength.
XXX Ale of triple strength.
✱ Used on stock tickers to denote that the quotation it follows is correct.
Number or numbered; as, #60 thread. When used after figures # sometimes means "pounds"; as, 5#.

NOTE. — The sign @ is a graphic modification of the Latin word ad, meaning at, or to, or perhaps of its first letter only. ℗ is another form of p, the initial letter of the Latin word per, by. % is a cursive variation of ÷, the sign of division; thus, six per cent may be expressed by $\frac{6}{100}$, or 6 ÷ 100, or, without indicating the denominator, 6÷, whence, in rapid writing, 6%, or 6⁺/₀.

CHEMISTRY

Throughout this article cross references refer to definitions in the main vocabulary, unless otherwise specified.

Every element is represented by a symbol consisting of the initial or abbreviation of its name (in certain cases its Latin name); as, H for hydrogen, O for oxygen, Ag (from Latin argentum) for silver, and the like, each symbol when used singly always indicating a single atom of the substance represented by it; thus, O stands for one atom of oxygen, C for a single atom of carbon, etc. For a complete list of symbols of elements (except a few transitional stages of radioactive elements), see ELEMENT, n., 3. To express more than one atom of an element, a number is used. A molecule consisting of two or more atoms of the same element is indicated by the symbol of the element, with the number of atoms written after it below the line; as, O_2, a molecule of oxygen, consisting of two atoms; O_3, a molecule of ozone, which consists of three atoms of oxygen.

Isotopes are sometimes distinguished by writing the number indicating the atomic mass to the right of the ordinary symbol for the element and above the line; as, H^1 means the hydrogen isotope of atomic mass 1; H^2 means the hydrogen isotope of atomic mass 2; O^{16}, the oxygen isotope of atomic mass 16; O^{18}, the oxygen isotope of atomic mass 18.

The molecular formula of a compound is made by writing the symbols of its constituent elements, with a small figure at the lower right of each to denote the number of atoms of this element in a molecule of the compound (the figure 1 being always omitted); as, H_2O, water, (two atoms of hydrogen united to one of oxygen); $CaCO_3$, calcium carbonate; H_2SO_4, sulphuric acid. Sometimes these are written with a comma or a period between the symbols of the original compounds from which they are supposed to be derived; as, CaO,CO_2, calcium carbonate, regarded as calcium oxide combined with carbon dioxide. For other kinds of formulas and the symbols used in them, see FORMULA, 5. Two or more molecules or equivalents of a substance taking part in a reaction or incorporated within a more complex compound are commonly indicated by writing a large figure at the left of the formula of the substance; as, $5H_2O$, five molecules of water. In generalized formulas and equations, a small letter, ordinarily n or x, may be substituted for the number; as, $C_nH_{2n-8}O_{10}$, the general formula for the saponins; $(C_6H_{10}O_5)_x$, the formula for cellulose. The symbol R and R′ are often used as general symbols for hydrocarbon radicals; and various abbreviations, usually initial letters, are used in formulas for these and other organic radicals; as, B- (or Bz-) for benzene; Py- for pyridine.

+ signifies "plus," "and," "together with," and is used esp. in chemical equations between the symbols of substances brought together for a reaction or produced by such reaction. Placed above a symbol or to its right above the line, it signifies a unit charge of positive electricity. Thus, Ca^{++} denotes the ion of calcium which carries two positive charges. The plus sign is also used, esp. in organic chemistry, to indicate dextrorotation; as, +142°. It is also sometimes used to indicate a base or alkaloid, when placed above the initial letter of the name of the substance; as, $\overset{+}{M}$, morphine; $\overset{+}{Q}$, quinine.

— signifies a single "bond" (see 3d BOND, 11), or unit of attractive force or affinity, and is sometimes used between the symbols of elements or groups which unite to form a compound; thus, H—Cl for HCl; H—O—H for H_2O. Placed above a symbol or to its right above the line, it signifies a unit charge of negative electricity; thus, Cl^- denotes a chlorine ion carrying a negative charge. The dash also indicates, esp. in organic chemistry, levorotation; as, −92°. It sometimes indicates an acid, when placed above the initial letter of the name of the acid; as, $\overline{C}$, citric acid; $\overline{T}$, tartaric acid. It may also be used as a simple sign of subtraction to indicate removal, as of a part from a compound.

= is used in formulas to indicate a double bond (see DOUBLE BOND). Placed above a symbol or to its right above the line, it signifies two unit charges of negative electricity; as, $SO_4^{=}$, the negative ion of sulphuric acid, carrying two negative charges. Between the halves of a chemical equation = is read "give" or "form" (see below).

< or > is often used to show that an element or radical is bivalent; as, Se<, bivalent selenium; $>SO_2$, the bivalent radical sulphonyl. In formulas, it shows that a bivalent element or radical is united to two different radicals or elements.

≡ signifies a triple bond (see TRIPLE BOND) or, if placed above the line to the right, a triple charge of negative electricity.

. is often used instead of — to indicate a bond; as, H.Cl for H—Cl. Sometimes it is used instead of + to denote a unit positive charge of electricity; as, Ca.. denotes the calcium ion, which carries two positive charges. The dot is also used to separate parts of a compound regarded as loosely joined or easily separable. For example, $CuSO_4.5H_2O$ (the formula for blue vitriol) signifies that five molecules of water are loosely united to one of copper sulphate (cf. WATER OF CRYSTALLIZATION). For rare and obsolete uses, see the end of this article.

: is generally used throughout this book to indicate a double bond (see DOUBLE BOND); but in electronic formulas it is used instead of — or . to indicate a single bond (paired electrons).

⁝ indicates a triple bond.

′ is frequently used to indicate valence; thus, Fe″ denotes bivalent iron; Fe‴, trivalent iron. Sometimes its use is restricted to negative ions, so that it is equivalent to —; as, OH′, signifying that the hydroxyl ion has one negative valence or a unit charge of negative electricity.

( ) Parentheses are used to mark groups or radicals within a compound, as in $C_6H_4(CH_3)_2$, the formula for xylene which contains two methyl radicals (CH_3).

[ ] Brackets are used in co-ordination formulas to distinguish between an inner and an outer sphere of attraction. Thus $[PtCl_6]K_2$ signifies that one atom of platinum and six of chlorine constitute the inner sphere of attraction with two atoms of potassium outside.

⌐ or ⌣ This sign is sometimes used in structural formulas to indicate that atoms are joined though their symbols appear separated by other groups in the printing. When another atom or group intervenes, the symbol for that atom or group is written in the middle of the sign; thus, the cyclic formula for glucose $CH_2OH\overline{CH(CHOH)_3CHO}H$, signifies that the second and last carbon atoms are both linked to the same atom of oxygen (see GLUCOSE).

Chemical reactions are usually expressed quantitatively by equations in which the initial substances are written at the left (separated by + signs) and the products at the right (also separated by + signs) the two halves of the equation being separated by one of the following symbols: — = Give or form.

⟶ Give, pass over to, or lead to. Thus, $MnO_2 + 4HCl \longrightarrow MnCl_2 + Cl_2 + 2H_2O$ means that one molecule of manganese dioxide reacts with four molecules of hydrochloric acid to form one molecule of manganese chloride, one of chlorine, and two of water.

⇄ Forms and is formed from (indicating that the reaction is reversible).

A whole series of reactions taking place concurrently or successively is often represented by a single equation, the successive stages being separated by appropriate symbols. Thus, $NaNO_3 + NH_4Cl \rightleftarrows NaCl + NH_4NO_3 \longrightarrow 2H_2O + N_2$ means that sodium nitrate and ammonium chloride form and are formed by sodium chloride and ammonium nitrate, and the latter forms water and nitrogen (irreversible).

↓ written after a formula in an equation means that the substance designated appears as a precipitate. Thus, $AgNO_3 + HCl \longrightarrow AgCl\downarrow + HNO_3$ means that silver nitrate and hydrochloric acid react to form silver chloride and nitric acid, and that the silver chloride is a precipitate.

↑ written after a formula in an equation means that the substance designated passes off as a gas. Thus, $Mg_3N_2 + 6H_2O \longrightarrow 3Mg(OH)_2 + 2NH_3\uparrow$ means that one molecule of magnesium nitride and six molecules of water form three molecules of magnesium hydroxide and two of ammonia, and that the latter passes off as a gas.

≡ or ⇌ Is equivalent; — used in quantitative statements to show how much of one substance will react with a given quantity of another substance, so as to leave no excess of either.

Special symbols used occasionally (as for distinguishing between isomers or for indicating the structure of organic compounds) are too numerous and complex for full treatment here. For example:

⬡ In formulas denotes the benzene ring (see BENZENE RING).

* Asterisk, or star, is used to mark asymmetric carbon atoms.

1-, 2-, 3-, 4-, 5-, 6-, etc. These figures, used initially in names (not formulas), as in 6-aminopurine, refer to the positions of substituting groups, attached to the first (or second, third, etc.) of the numbered atoms of the parent compound. See PURINE; NAPHTHALENE.

Many special symbols are really abbreviations; as, Em for emanation (see ACTINON); a-, or as-, for asymmetric, s- for symmetrical, o- for ortho-, m- for meta-, p- for para-, and v- for vicinal (see BENZENE RING; NAPHTHALENE); d- for dextro- (see DEXTRO-, FRUCTOSE); l- for levo-, and r- for racemic (see TARTARIC ACID); N or n for normal (see NORMAL, 4 a).

Such symbols are italicized, and are followed by a hyphen when prefixed to the name of a compound. In formulas they are enclosed in parentheses and the hyphen is omitted, as in $C_6H^4 < {CO \atop SO_2} > NH$ (o), the lower-case letter and the italic type serving to distinguish them from the symbols of elements. Some abbreviations have come from foreign languages; as, Z, for German Zahl, number, meaning atomic number. In this book, similar abbreviations are given in a special table of abbreviations and the meanings can be found by looking in the main vocabulary for the word or prefix given at the abbreviation entry in the table. A few of the most important special symbols are given in the vocabulary itself (see *p*H).

Letters are sometimes used with quasi-numerical force (A meaning first, B second, C third, etc.), as in distinguishing successive stages in the disintegration of radioactive elements.

Greek letters are even more frequently used with numerical significance (in order of their sequence in the Greek alphabet, not as Greek numerals), to express serial arrangement or position; to distinguish between allotropic forms of certain elements (cf. ALPHA IRON; BETA IRON; GAMMA IRON); to distinguish between isomers or modifications (cf. CELLULOSE; SULPHUR TRIOXIDE) and to indicate the position of substituting groups in certain compounds (see NAPHTHALENE; QUINOLINE). Many of the Greek letters have various special meanings in addition to the above. The most important of these are given in the main vocabulary at the entries alpha, beta, etc.

α Alpha, first. In aliphatic compounds, α indicates that the substituting atom or radical is attached to the same carbon atom as the distinguishing group (in acids the —COOH group, in alcohols the —OH, in aldehydes the —CHO, etc.). In disubstitution products of certain benzene derivatives, α is sometimes used to indicate that the substituting groups occupy the positions 3 and 5 with reference to the distinguishing group (see BENZENE RING). Thus, α-resorcylic acid is the resorcylic acid in which the two hydroxyl groups occupy positions 3 and 5, the carboxyl being regarded as occupying position 1 (see RESORCYLIC, adj.). In polycyclic compounds, α commonly indicates that the substituent is attached to a carbon atom next to one of the atoms shared by both rings (see NAPHTHALENE, Illust.); but in heterocyclic compounds, α commonly indicates that the substituent is attached to one of the carbon atoms nearest the other atom, for example, the nitrogen atom in pyridine and quinoline (see PYRIDINE, Illust.; QUINOLINE, Illust.; TRIAZINE). As applied to a sugar, α denotes one of the cyclic forms (see GLUCOSE). In physical chemistry, α denotes degree of dissociation into ions (see OSTWALD'S DILUTION LAW). Sometimes α means the observed angle of rotation, while [α] means the specific rotation (see SPECIFIC ROTATION). Occasionally α is used instead of a as an abbreviation for ana. See also ALPHA PARTICLE; ALPHA RAY; SULPHUR, 1.

β Beta, second. In aliphatic compounds, β indicates that the substituting atom or radical is attached to the carbon atom that is next to the one to which the distinguishing group is attached (cf. α, above). In disubstitution products of certain benzene derivatives, β is sometimes used to indicate that the substituting groups occupy the positions 2 and 4 with reference to the distinguishing group (see BENZENE RING). Thus, β-resorcylic acid is the resorcylic acid in which the two hydroxyl groups occupy the positions 2 and 4, the carboxyl being regarded as occupying position 1 (see RESORCYLIC, adj.). In polycyclic compounds, β commonly indicates that the substituent is attached to a carbon atom second from one of the carbon atoms shared by both groups (see NAPHTHALENE, Illust.); but in heterocyclic compounds, β commonly indicates that the substituent is attached to one of the carbon atoms second from the other atom, for example, the nitrogen atom in pyridine and quinoline (see PYRIDINE, Illust.; QUINOLINE, Illust.; TRIAZINE). Applied to a sugar, β denotes one of the cyclic forms (see GLUCOSE). See also BETA PARTICLE; BETA RAY; SULPHUR, 1.

γ Gamma, third. Whenever used with reference to position, γ means next after β in a direction opposite from α. See α and β, above. In disubstitution products of certain benzene derivatives, γ indicates that the two substituting groups occupy positions 2 and 5 with reference to the distinguishing group (see RESORCYLIC, adj.). As applied to a sugar, γ denotes an especially unstable form. In physical chemistry, γ sometimes denotes surface tension. See also GAMMA RAY.

δ Delta, fourth. This denotes position after γ (see above).

Δ Capital delta, in physical chemistry symbolizes (1) the coefficient of diffusion, and (2) lowering of the freezing point. In organic chemistry, Δ with a number or numbers denotes the position of double bond, esp. between carbon atoms; as: ε Epsilon, fifth. In physics and physical chemistry, ε usually symbolizes either dielectric constant or electrode potential; ε_c is potential above a normal calomel electrode; ε_h is potential above a normal hydrogen electrode. Sometimes, ε is used as an abbreviation for epi- (see EPI-, 2).

Δ^2 A double bond between the second and third carbon atoms.

$\Delta^{2,4}$ Two double bonds, one between the second and third and another between the fourth and fifth.

$\Delta^{1(7)}$ One double bond between the first and seventh.

ζ Zeta, sixth.

η Eta, seventh. Coefficient of viscosity (which see in Vocabulary).

θ Theta, eighth. Temperature in degrees centigrade above 0° C. Also Curie point (see CURIE'S LAW).

ι Iota, ninth.

κ Kappa, tenth. Sometimes used as an abbreviation for kata- (see NAPHTHALENE).

λ Lambda, eleventh. See SULPHUR, 1.

Λ Capital lambda. Symbol for equivalent conductivity.

μ Mu, twelfth; or more frequently meso- (see MESO-, 7 b (2)), middle; for example, attachment to the carbon atom between two nitrogen atoms, as in the formula for imidazole:

In physical chemistry, μ symbolizes molar conductance. See also SULPHUR, 1.

ν Nu, thirteenth. Frequency.

ξ Xi, fourteenth.

ο Omicron, fifteenth.

π Pi, sixteenth. In physical chemistry, osmotic pressure. In organic chemistry, abbr. for peri- (see NAPHTHALENE).

ρ Rho, seventeenth. Sometimes used for pros- (see NAPHTHALENE).

σ or ς Sigma, eighteenth. Abbr. for syn- (see SYN-, 2).

τ Tau, nineteenth.

υ Upsilon, twentieth.

φ Phi, twenty-first. Symbol for the phenyl group, C_6H_5. Also sometimes used for amphi- (see NAPHTHALENE).

χ Chi, twenty-second.

ψ Psi, twenty-third. Abbr. for pseudo-.

ω omega, twenty-fourth; the last; the end; denoting esp. attachment to the last atom of a chain or side chain. In physical chemistry, [ω] means specific magnetic rotatory power.

The following symbols, formerly in use, are now practically obsolete:

. One equivalent of oxygen; — written above a symbol representing an element, and repeated to indicate two, three, or more atoms or equivalents; thus, Fe denotes a compound of one atom or equivalent of oxygen with one of iron; $\dot{S}$, a compound of three atoms or equivalents of oxygen with one of sulphur.

, One atom or equivalent of sulphur; — used in the same manner as the preceding; thus, Fe denotes a compound of two atoms or equivalents of sulphur and one of iron.

NOTE. — A dash drawn across a symbol having either of the foregoing signs above it, denotes that two atoms or equivalents of the substance represented by the symbol are joined with the number of atoms or equivalents of oxygen or sulphur indicated by the dots or commas; thus, $\overset{\cdot\cdot\cdot}{Fe}$ represents a compound of two atoms or equivalents of iron and three of oxygen, forming sesquioxide of iron. See also the section headed Physics, Engineering, Weights, and Measures, below.

CHESS

For the symbols used to designate the various chessmen and the squares of the chessboard, see 1st CHESS, 1, in the Vocabulary.

○—○ Castles with king's rook. See CASTLE, v. i., in the Vocabulary.

○—○—○ Castles with queen's rook.

ch, #, or ♯ Checks.

—, =, or # Moves to.

× or # Takes.

♯ or ♯ Takes and checks.

CHURCH AND RELIGION

℟ Response; — used in Roman Catholic and some other prayer books.

℣, V', or ℣ Versicle; — used in Roman Catholic and other service books to denote the part recited or sung by the priest, or person who presides at the office or prayers.

✳ A character used in Roman Catholic service books to divide each verse of a psalm into two parts, and show where the response begins.

✠ or + A sign of the cross used by the Pope, and by Roman Catholic bishops and archbishops, immediately before the subscription of their names. In Roman Catholic and some other service books, it is used in those places of the prayers and benediction where the sign of the cross is to be made.

℞ See LABARUM, also XP, in the Vocabulary.

✝ Cross. Symbol of divinity and of Christianity. For various meanings and modified forms, see CROSS, in the Vocabulary.

☥ Ankh, or Crux Ansata. The ancient Egyptian symbol for life, retained by the Copts of Egypt as the symbol of Christianity.

卐 or 卍 Gammadion.

For symbols applied to certain sacred manuscripts, see CODEX, in the Vocabulary.

ELECTRICITY AND MAGNETISM

SYMBOLS FOR ELECTRICAL AND MAGNETIC QUANTITIES AND UNITS

NOTE. — It will be observed that some of the letters occur in two or three places in the table.

When the meanings are radically different, the context will usually show which meaning is intended. Some of the discrepancies reflect diversity of usage among different authorities, as the use of Ω for ohm by some and for microhm by others. When there is risk of ambiguity, writers should indicate the meanings of the symbols they use. In many instances, however, discrepancies are more apparent than real, since certain concepts are so closely related as to be commonly identified in practice. For example, D means dielectric flux density, which is called also electrostatic flux density; and voltage is another name for electric tension or electromotive force, so that E e and V v are often used interchangeably.

Where a distinction between electromotive force and difference of electric potential is desirable, the symbols E e and V v, respectively, may be used.

Where distinctions between maximum, instantaneous, root-mean-square, and average values are necessary, E_m, I_m, P_m are recommended for maximum values; e, i, p for instantaneous values, E, I for effective (r. m. s.) values, and P for average value.

In accordance with the practice in other branches of engineering, it is recommended that quantities per unit volume, area, length, etc., be represented as far as practicable by lower-case letters corresponding to the capitals which represent the total quantities.

In print, vector or complex quantities should be represented by boldface letters.

Symbol	Name of Quantity
Y or y	Admittance.
amp or A	Ampere.
amp-hr or Ah	Ampere-hour.
μ	Amplification factor.
θ or φ	Angular phase difference.
ω	Angular frequency; angular velocity.
C	Capacitance; capacity, electrostatic.
σ	Charge density, current density.
G or g	Conductance.
γ	Conductivity.
C	Coulomb.
I or i	Current.
K or ε	Dielectric constant.
Ψ	Dielectric flux.
D	Dielectric flux density.
E or e	Difference of potential, electric.
η	Efficiency.
E or e	Electric potential.
E e or V v	Electric tension.
e.m.f., E, or e	Electromotive force.
c	Electrostatic capacity.
Ψ	Electrostatic flux.
W	Energy.
Λ	Equivalent conductivity.
F or Φ	Farad.
D	Flux density, electrostatic.
B	Flux density, magnetic.
f	Frequency.
h or H	Henry.
Z or z	Impedance.
L	Inductance.
H	Intensity of magnetic field.
kv or $_K V$	Kilovolt.
kva or $_K VA$	Kilovolt-ampere.
kw or $_K W$	Kilowatt.
kwhr or $_K Wh$	Kilowatt-hour.
Φ	Magnetic flux.
B	Magnetic flux density.
H	Magnetic force (sense h).
μ	Magnetic permeability.
ℱ or mmf	Magnetomotive force.
MΩ	Megohm.
μa or μA	Microampere.
μf or μF (also mf or mF)	Microfarad.
μμf	Micromicrofarad.
Ω	Microhm.
μ	Micron.
μw or μW	Microwatt.
ma or mA	Milliampere.
mf or mF	Millifarad.
mh or mH	Millihenry.
mv or mV	Millivolt.
M	Mutual inductance.
N	Number of conductors or turns.
Ω or ω	Ohm.
T	Period.
μ	Permeability.
P	Permeance.

C	Permittance.
K or ϵ	Permittivity.
θ or ϕ	Phase difference, angular.
P or p	Power.
Q or q	Quantity, electric.
X or x	Reactance.
$\mathfrak{R}$	Reluctance.
ν	Reluctivity.
R or r	Resistance.
ρ	Resistivity.
L	Self-inductance.

n	Speed of rotation.
b	Susceptance.
k or κ	Susceptibility to magnetism.
γ	The unit of intensity of magnetic field, 0.000 01 gauss (see GAUSS).
v or V	Volt.
E, e, V, or v	Voltage.
va or VA	Volt-ampere.
VC	Volt-coulomb.
w or W	Watt.
whr or Wh	Watt-hour.

For symbols of quantities not specifically or exclusively electrical, such as work, horsepower, etc., see the section headed Physics, Engineering, Weights, and Measures, below.

ELECTRICITY AND RADIO

- Air Break Switch, Horn Gap.
- Air Circuit Breaker.
- Alternating-Current Generator or Motor.
- Ammeter.
- Ampere-Hour Meter.
- Antenna.
- Arc.
- Battery.
- Battery (positive electrode indicated by the long line).
- * Condenser, Fixed.
- Condenser, Fixed, Shielded.
- Condenser, Variable.
- Condenser, Variable (moving plate indicated).
- Condenser, Variable, Shielded.
- Counterpoise.
- Crystal Detector.
- Direct-Current Generator or Motor.
- Direct-Current Generator or Motor with Shunt and Series Field.
- Disconnecting Switch — Basic Symbol.
- Double-Throw Switch.
- Frequency Meter.
- Fuse.
- Galvanometer.

- Full-Wave Rectifier Tube (with directly heated cathode).
- Triode (with directly heated cathode).
- Triode (with indirectly heated cathode).
- Tetrode (with directly heated cathode).
- Screen-Grid Tube (with directly heated cathode).
- Screen-Grid Tube (with indirectly heated cathode).
- Pentode (with directly heated cathode).
- Thermoelement.

* Preferred symbol for radio purposes.

- * Transformer, Air Core.
- * Transformer, Iron Core.
- * Transformer, Variable Coupling.
- * Transformer, Variable Coupling (moving coil indicated).
- Voltmeter.
- Wattmeter.
- Wires, Joined.
- Wires, Crossed, not Joined.

* Preferred symbol for radio purposes.

HIGHWAY

A red light means stop; a yellow light means proceed with caution; and a green light means go. Other symbols vary somewhat from place to place. The following, usually painted on small signboards by the roadside, are widely used:

- Ascent to the left.
- Ascent to the right.
- Crossroad to the left.
- Crossroad to the right.
- Descent to the left.
- Descent to the right.
- Double crossroad.
- Double left curve.
- Double right curve.
- Intersection of two main roads.
- Left angle.
- Left angle with local road ahead.
- Left angle, local road to the right.
- Left curve.
- Left curve with local road to the left.
- Left curve with local road to the right.
- Railroad crossing.
- Right angle.
- Right angle with local road ahead.
- Right angle, local road to the left.
- Right curve.
- Right curve with local road to the left.
- Right curve with local road to the right.
- Underpass.

1934		MCMXXXIV	Nineteen thirty-four.

For billion, trillion, etc., and for differences between the English and American systems of numeration, see NUMERATION, 2, Note.

Hebrew letters also have been used with numerical significance, as ט (teth) for 9, ס (samekh) for 60, ר (resh) for 200, and ש (sin) for 300, but no attempt is made here to cover numerical systems that have had no currency in English books.

In modern Mathematics, the so-called Arabic numerals have superseded the other systems. Roman numerals are still used to some extent, not in mathematics, but in dates, headings of chapters, upon the dials of timepieces, and the like. The most usual forms are given first in the list; those that stand after these are rare forms, or such as are only occasionally used. Small letters as well as capitals are sometimes used as Roman numerals. Greek numerals are no longer used in English works. For detailed explanations of the Greek and Roman systems and for a few obsolete symbols not shown here, see GREEK NUMERAL; ROMAN NUMERAL.

The Arabic numerals are so called because first introduced into Europe by the Arabs. They were not, however, invented by that people, but were derived by them from Hindustan. The characters were originally the initial letters of the Sanskrit names for the nine digits, one, two, three, etc., but have undergone considerable changes of form. The cipher was originally a dot, used as a mere arbitrary sign to mark place or local value. See GOBAR.

. The decimal point (.) is now used with Arabic numerals to separate whole numbers from fractions; as 3.4, read "three and four tenths." The first figure to the left of the decimal point represents the number of units, the second, the number of tens, the third of hundreds, the fourth of thousands, etc., each additional figure at the left representing a number ten times as great as its value would be, if it occupied the position next to the right; as, 4295.7, which is read "four thousand two hundred ninety-five and seven tenths." The first figure to the right of the decimal point represents the number of tenths, the second of hundredths, the third of thousandths, etc., each additional figure at the right representing a number one tenth as great as its value would be if it occupied the position next to the left; as, 3.496, which is read "three units and four hundred ninety-six thousandths."

, A comma is sometimes used to separate large numbers into groups of three digits each; as 2,496,867.25, read "two million, four hundred ninety-six thousand, eight hundred sixty-seven and twenty-five hundredths." Spaces are now commonly used instead of commas.

— In ordinary modern Arabic numerals, a dash over the final figure of a decimal indicates that this figure is doubtful or only approximate, whereas the other figures are accurate; as, $1.372\overline{4}$. In circulating and repeating decimals, a dot, or dots, may be used to mark the repetend; as 75.3, meaning 75.33333 . . . etc.; or .03205, meaning .03205205-205 . . . etc.

OTHER EXPRESSIONS FOR QUANTITIES

Letters are used to symbolize numbers of unknown, indefinite, or variable values, the letters in the early part of the alphabet (a, b, c, etc.) usually representing known values, those at the end (x, y, z) unknown. Greek letters are frequently used, and sometimes German and Hebrew. See ALPHABET, Table, p. 75. Their various specific meanings, in higher mathematics are too numerous to be covered in detail here, but a few of the most important are given in later sections.

′ A prime, or accent, is added to distinguish between different values of the same variable or between different variables; as, a', a'', a''', etc., which are usually read a prime, a second prime, or a double prime, etc. In England these are often read a dash, a double dash, or a two dash, etc. When the number of the accents is greater than three, the corresponding Roman numerals are used instead of them; as, a', a'', a''', a_{iv}, a_v, a_{vi}, etc. The accents are often written below also; as, $a_{\prime}$, $a_{\prime\prime}$, $a_{\prime\prime\prime}$, a_{iv}, a_v, etc. Figures, and also letters, are sometimes used for the same purpose; as x_1, x_2, x_3, x_4, which are read "x one, x two, x three, x four"; b_1, b_2, . . . b_n, read "b one, b two, and so forth up to b sub n." Superscript letters and Arabic numerals should be avoided because they are easily confused with exponents. Thus, it is misleading to use a^2, a^3, etc., unless one means a square, a cube, etc. (see below).

0 Zero; also, infinitesimal; a quantity less than any assignable value.

∞ Infinity; a quantity greater than any finite quantity.

ELEMENTARY GEOMETRY

Capital letters are often used for points and small letters for lines. Similar figures are often designated by the same letters, distinguished by the addition of accent marks; as, ABC and A′B′C′. See SIMILAR, 3.

∠ Angle; the angle; as, ∠ ABC = ∠ DEF; that is, the angle ABC is equal to the angle DEF; less frequently written ⊃ or ⋗ or ⋟.

By some geometers, the angle between two lines, as a and b, is also indicated by placing one of the letters denoting the enclosing lines over the other; as, $\frac{a}{b}$; that is, the angle between the lines a and b; $\sin \frac{a}{b}$; that is, the sine of the angle between the lines a and b.

⊥ The perpendicular; perpendicular to; is perpendicular to; as, draw AB ⊥ CD; that is, draw AB perpendicular to CD.

∥ Parallel; parallel to; is parallel to; as, AB ∥ CD; that is, AB is parallel to CD.

⊙ or ○ Circle; circumference; 360°.

⌒ Arc of a circle; arc.

△ Triangle; the triangle; as, △ ABC = △ DEF; that is, the triangle ABC is equal to the triangle DEF.

□ Square; the square; as, □ ABCD; that is, the square ABCD.

▭ Rectangle; the rectangle; as, ▭ ABCD = ▭ EFGH; that is, the rectangle ABCD equals the rectangle EFGH.

▱ or ▱ Parallelogram.

UNITS

° Degrees; as, 60°; that is, sixty degrees.

′ Minutes of arc; as, 30′; that is, thirty minutes; also, minutes of time; also, feet; inches.

″ Seconds of arc; as, 20″; that is, twenty seconds; also, seconds of time; also inches.

h Hours.

m Minutes.

s Seconds.

lb. or ℔ Pounds.

Pounds, if it follows a numeral; number, if it precedes the numeral.

For other symbols of common units, see Physics, Engineering, Weights, and Measures, below. See also Symbols for Electrical and Magnetic Quantities, under Electricity and Magnetism, above.

SPECIAL CONSTANTS, OR LETTER SYMBOLS HAVING SPECIAL NUMERICAL VALUES

π Pi; the number 3.14159265+; the ratio of the circumference of a circle to its diameter, of a semicircle to its radius, and of the area of a circle to the square of its radius. In a circle whose radius is unity, it is equal to the semicircumference, and hence is used to designate an arc of 180°. In a circle whose diameter is unity, it is equal to the circumference, or an arc of 360°.

e, or ε a The number 2.7182818+; the base of the natural system of logarithms. b The eccentricity of a conic section.

M The modulus of a system of logarithms; used especially for the modulus of the common system of logarithms, the base of which is 10. In this system it is equal to 0.4342944819+.

R° Radius of a circle in degrees of arc, equal to 57.29578°. Rare.

R′ Radius in minutes of arc, equal to 3437.7468′. Rare.

R″ Radius in seconds of arc, equal to 206264.8″. Rare.

For the equations defining the constants and other terms below, see the definitions of their names in the Vocabulary.

γ Eulerian constant. γ = 0.5772175.

Γ Gamma function.

E Young's modulus.

U and V Thermal parameters.

RELATIONS AND OPERATIONS

——— Vinculum, or ( ) Parentheses, [ ] Brackets, or { } Braces, indicate that the quantities to which they are applied, or which are enclosed by them, are to be taken together, and are subject to the same operations. Brackets sometimes indicate absolute value; as [x], the absolute value of x; — often written |x|, and in applied mathematics and physics they often indicate a dimensional expression; as, $[a] = \frac{l}{t}$, meaning a has the dimensions of a length divided by time.

+ Plus; added to; and; more; indicating addition; as, $a + b = c$; that is, a added to b makes a sum equal to c; $6 + 4 = 10$. It is also used after a number to indicate that the number is only approximate and that the magnitude represented is really larger; as, the square root of 2 is 1.4142135 +. It is sometimes written before a number or letter to indicate that the magnitude symbolized is positive; as + b, read "positive b," or "plus b."

— Minus; less; indicating subtraction; as, $a - b = c$; that is, a less or diminished by b is equal to c; $6 - 4 = 2$. It is often used after a number to indicate that the magnitude represented is really somewhat smaller than the approximate value given in figures; as the square root of 2 is 1.414214—. It is sometimes written before a number or letter to indicate that the magnitude symbolized is negative; as $-x$, read "negative x," or "minus x."

× Multiplied by; times; as, $a \times b = ab$; $6 \times 4 = 24$; in dimensions, by; as, a room 10′ × 14′ (read "ten feet by fourteen feet").

Multiplication is also often indicated by placing a dot between the factors, or by writing the latter, when not numerals, one after another without any sign; as, $a \times b \times c = a \,.\, b \,.\, c = abc$; $2 \times 3 \times 4 = 2 \,.\, 3 \,.\, 4 = 24$.

÷, or: Divided by; as, $a \div b$; that is, a divided by b; $6 \div 3 = 2$.

Division is also very often indicated by writing the divisor under the dividend, with a line between them, or by writing the divisor after the dividend, with an oblique line between them; as, $\frac{a}{b}$; that is, a divided by b; $\frac{6}{3} = 2$; ⅜ = three eighths; x/y, x divided by y.

⊥ Divided by; as, $a \perp b$; that is, a divided by b; $6 \perp 3 = 6 \div 3 = 2$. Rare.

Regardless of what symbol is used for division or for multiplication, its influence extends only as far as the next plus or minus sign, unless a vinculum, or parentheses, brackets, or braces have been used. Thus, $a \times b + c + e \div f$ means that the product of a times b is to be added to c and the sum thus obtained is to be added to the quotient of e divided by f; but $[a \times (b + c) + e] \div f$ means that a is to be multiplied by the sum of b and c, this product added to e, and the resulting sum divided by f, giving a very different result.

= Is equal to; equals; as, $(a + b) \times c = ac + bc$; $6 + 2 = 8$.

≈ or ≒ Is approximately equal to; as, $\pi \doteqdot 3\frac{1}{7}$.

≠ or ≠ Is not equal to; the contradictory of =; as $a \neq b$.

> Is greater than; as, $a > b$; that is, a is greater than b; $6 > 5$; also, precedes; as, $c > d$, read "c precedes d".

< Is less than; as, $a < b$; that is, a is less than b; $3 < 4$; also, succeeds, as, $f < e$, read "f succeeds" e.

⊏ Is greater than; — sometimes used instead of >.

⊐ Is less than; — sometimes used instead of <.

≮ ≯ ≧ or ≥ Is not less than; the contradictory of <; as, $a \not< b$; that is, a is not less than b, or, a may be equal to, or greater than, b, but cannot be less than it.

∼ or —: Difference.

≎ Is equivalent to; applied to magnitudes or quantities which are equal in area or volume, but are not of the same form, or capable of superposition; as, $a^2 \Bumpeq b\ c$; that is, the square whose side is a is equivalent in area to the rectangle whose sides are b and c. Rare.

≈ Is equivalent to; applied to aggregates that can be set in one-to-one correspondence with each other.

≅ Is congruent to; as, 38 ≅ 59 (modulus 7). See CONGRUENT, 3 a.

≡ (a) Is identical with; as $(a + b)^2 \equiv a^2 + 2ab + b^2$. (b) Is congruent with. Cf. ≅ above.

∽ or ∽ Is similar to.

≃ Is similarly ordered; as, A ≃ B, read A is a set similarly ordered to the ordered set B.

∴ Therefore.

∵ Since, or because.

. . . . And so on.

⋔ Of the form of; as, $a \pitchfork (2n + 1)$; that is, the term a is of the form $2n + 1$; 17 ⋔ $(2 \times 8 + 1)$; that is, the odd number 17 is of the form $2 \times 8 + 1$. Rare.

∣ Is divisible by; as, $a \mid b$; that is, b is an exact factor of a; $8 \nmid 2$. Rare.

∼ ∼ or ≏ The difference between; used to indicate the difference between two quantities without designating which is the greater; as, $a \sim b$; that is, the difference between a and b.

—: The difference between; excess. Rare.

∝ Varies directly as; is directly proportional to; as, $a \propto b$; that is, a varies as b, or is dependent for its value upon b.

! or ⌊ or ⌋ The continued product of numbers from one upward; the factorial; as, $4! = 4 \times 3 \times 2 \times 1 = \lfloor 4$ (read "factorial four," or "the factorial of 4").

! Used with other special meanings in higher mathematics.

PROPORTION

$a/b = c/d$ is now the preferred way of writing a geometric proportion.

$a - b = c - d$ is the preferred way of writing an arithmetical proportion.

The following symbols are also used:

: Is to; the ratio of.

: : As; equals.

∺ Geometric proportion; as, ∺ $a : b :: c : d$; that is, the geometric proportion, a is to b as c is to d; or the ratio of a to b equals the ratio of c to d.

∸ Minus; the arithmetical ratio of; as, $a \dot{-} b :: c \dot{-} d$; that is, $a - b = c - d$. Rare.

POWERS, ROOTS, AND IMAGINARIES

¹, ², ³, etc. Exponents, placed above and at the right hand of quantities to denote that they are raised to powers whose degree is indicated by the figure; as, a^1; that is, the first power of a; a^2, the square, or second power, of a; a^3, the cube, or third power, of a; and the like.

These signs are also often used to indicate the repetition of an operation; as, d^2x, d^3x, d^4x, etc., indicating that the operation of differentiation has been performed upon x two, three, four, etc., times. See below, under Calculus and Higher Mathematics.

Negative exponents are used to indicate the reciprocal of the corresponding power and also to indicate the inverse of an operation; as, t^{-1}, meaning the reciprocal of t if t is a number, and the inverse of t if t is an operation; a^{-2}, read "a to the minus, two power," means $\frac{1}{a^2}$ read "one over a square," or "the reciprocal of a^2," etc.

Notation by powers of 10 for very large or very small numbers is sometimes used; as 3.140×10^9 and 3.140×10^{-4}. The notation 0.0^6314 is used in tables, to indicate that there are five zeros after the decimal point. Occasionally the superior figure is used in this way to indicate the number of ciphers to be added, even when there are no other digits following. Thus 10^{12}, which means 1,000,000,000,000 when the figure 12 is used as an exponent, becomes 10,000,000.000,000 when the figure twelve is used to indicate the number of ciphers added. See TWELFTH-SECOND.

other than the square root, a figure (called the index) expressing the degree of the required root, is placed above the sign; as, $\sqrt[3]{a}$, $\sqrt[5]{a}$, $\sqrt[10]{a}$, etc.; that is, the cube root, fifth root, tenth root, etc., of a. This sign is merely a cursive modification of the letter r, which was used as an abbreviation of the Latin word radix, root. When no sign is used, the root is now usually assumed to be real and positive. The root of a quantity is also denoted by a fractional index at the right-hand side of the quantity and above it, the denominator of the index expressing the degree of the root; as, $a^{\frac{1}{2}}$, $a^{\frac{1}{3}}$, $a^{\frac{1}{5}}$; that is, the square, cube, and fifth roots of a, respectively.

log Logarithm.

nat. log or ln Natural logarithm.

i The imaginary square root of -1.

ω, ω^2 The imaginary cube roots of unity. See CUBE ROOT.

ξ and η See CAYLEY'S SOLUTION.

t The complex unit (see COMPLEX UNIT).

DETERMINANTS AND MATRICES

$\begin{vmatrix} a_1 & a_2 \\ b_1 & b_2 \end{vmatrix}$ Determinant of the second order.

$\begin{vmatrix} a_1 & a_2 & a_3 \\ b_1 & b_2 & b_3 \\ c_1 & c_2 & c_3 \end{vmatrix}$ Determinant of the third order.

$|a_{rs}|$ A determinant of which the element in the r row and s column is a_{rs}.

$\|a_{rs}\|$ A matrix of which the element in the r row and s column is a_{rs}.

TRIGONOMETRY, ANALYTIC GEOMETRY, CONICS, AND HYPERBOLIC FUNCTIONS

x, y, z; or ξ, η, ζ Cartesian co-ordinates (usually rectangular).

l, m, n Direction cosines (which see).

sin x. The sine of x; that is, of the arc represented by x. In the same manner cos x, tan x, cot x (or ctn x), sec x, cosec x (or csc x), versin x, and covers x, denote respectively the cosine, tangent, cotangent, secant, cosecant, versed sine, and coversed sine of the arc represented by x.

sin ^{-1}x. The arc whose sine is x; also, the principal value of the angle whose sine is x. In the same manner cos ^{-1}x, tan ^{-1}x, cot ^{-1}x, sec ^{-1}x, cosec ^{-1}x, versin ^{-1}x, and covers ^{-1}x, are used to denote respectively the arc (or the principal value of the angle) whose cosine, tangent, cotangent, secant, cosecant, versed sine, or coversed sine is x.

NOTE. — This sign must not be confounded with the negative index designating the reciprocal of a quantity, which would be applied to parentheses enclosing one of these expressions; as, $(\sin x)^{-1}$, which is equivalent to $\frac{1}{\sin x}$.

sinh x. The hyperbolic sine of x. It is the abbreviation of the Latin sinus hyperbolicus.

cosh x. The hyperbolic cosine of x. In the same manner tanh x, coth x (or ctnh x), sech x, and cosech x (or esch x) denote respectively the hyperbolic tangent, cotangent, secant, and cosecant.

f, or F Function; function of; as, $y = f(x)$; that is, y is, or equals, a function of x; or as, $y = f(x, z)$; that is, y is, or equals, a function of x and z.

NOTE. — Various other letters or signs are frequently used by mathematicians to indicate functions; as, ϕ, ϕ', ψ, π, Γ, [ ], and the like. Some of these are used also without the parentheses; as, $\phi\, x$, function of x.

f^{-1} The inverse of the function f.

$[f(x)]^{-1}$ The reciprocal of $f(x)$. $[f(x)]^{-1} = \frac{1}{f(x)}$ is read f of x to the minus one equals one divided by f of x.

f^2 The iteration of the operation denoted by the function f; also, the square of the function f.

$(x_1\, y_1)$, $(x_2\, y_2)$, $(x_3\, y_3)$, etc. Corresponding values of x and y; points on the graph representing an equation in which x and y are variables.

ρ Radius of curvature.

s Length of arc.

r Radius vector.

θ Angle between the radius vector and the polar axis; colatitude (see polar co-ordinates, under CO-ORDINATE, n., 2.

ϕ Longitude. (NOTE. — Other notations are more common in astronomy.)

r, θ, z Cylindrical co-ordinates.

e Eccentricity.

p Semilatus rectum.

CALCULUS AND HIGHER MATHEMATICS

Δ Finite difference, or increment. See INCREMENT, 4.

Δx The increment of x.

d Differential; as, dx; that is, the differential of x. See DIFFERENTIAL, n., 6.

∂ or δ Variation; as, ∂x; that is, the variation of x.

D Differential coefficient; derivative. The variable, with respect to which the differential coefficient is taken, is indicated by writing the letter designating it at the right hand below; as $D_t\phi$; that is, the differential coefficient of ϕ with respect to t.

NOTE. — The letters d, δ, Δ, D, and sometimes others, prefixed to quantities, are variously employed, by different mathematicians, to denote that the differentials, variations, finite differences, or differential coefficients of these quantities are to be taken; but the ordinary significations are those given above. An index is often placed at the right hand of d, to indicate the result of one or more repetitions of the process denoted by that sign; as, d^2x, d^3x, etc.; that is, the second, third, etc., differential of x, or the result of differentiating x two, three, etc., times.

$\frac{dy}{dx}$ or $\frac{d}{dx} \cdot y$ or D_xY The derivative of y with respect to x.

y' or $\dot{y}$ or $\dot{y}$ The derivative of y with respect to some other understood magnitude, ordinarily with respect to time.

$\frac{d.f(x)}{dx}$ or $\frac{df}{dx}$ or $\frac{d}{dx}f(x)$ or $f'(x)$. The derivative of the function $f(x)$ with respect to x.

$\frac{d}{dx}$ or D The differentiating operator.

$\frac{d^2y}{dx^2}$ or D_x^2Y The second derivative of y with respect to x.

$\ddot{y}$ Second derivative, esp. with respect to time.

$\frac{\partial u}{\partial x}$ or D_xU or u_x. The partial differential of u with respect to x, when u is a function of both x and y.

$\frac{1}{2!}\frac{d^2f}{dx^2}(dx)^2$ The second differential of a function $f(x)$.

$\frac{1}{2!}\left(\frac{\partial f}{\partial x}dx + \frac{\partial f}{\partial y}dy + \ldots\right)^2$ The second differential of a function, $f(x, y, \ldots)$, of several variables.

. Fluxion; differential; as, $\dot{x}$; that is, in modern notation, dx; and also equivalent to $\frac{dv}{dt}$, where t represents time, and v velocity. Now rare.

^{1} Derivation as to x.

∇ Nabla.

lim Limit.

$\longrightarrow$ Approaches the limit; as, $x \longrightarrow a$, read "x approaches the limit a."

$\lim x \longrightarrow a\ (y)$ The limit of y, as x approaches the limit a.

$\lim\limits_{x \longrightarrow b} f(x)$ The limit of a function of x, when x approaches the limit b; as $\lim\limits_{x \longrightarrow 1}\left(x + \frac{1}{x}\right)$, read "the limit of x plus 1 divided by x, when x approaches the limit one."

$\doteq$ Approaches.

$\bar{f}'(x)$ The upper limit of a function of x. Cf. DERIVATE, n., 2 b.

$\underline{f}'(x)$ The lower limit of a function of x. Cf. DERIVATE, n., 2 b.

$\int$ Integral; integral of; indicating that the expression before which it is placed is to be integrated; as, $\int 2xdx = x^2$; that is, the integral of $2xdx$ is x^2. See INTEGRATION, 5.

NOTE. — This sign is merely a modified form of S, which is itself the abbreviation of the Latin word summa, sum, the integral being the sum of the differentials. It is repeated to indicate that the operation of integration is to be performed twice, or three or more times, as $\iint$, $\iiint$, etc. For a number of times greater than three, an index is commonly written at the right hand above; as, $\int^m x dx^m$; that is, the mth integral, or the result of m integrations of xdx^m. The variable, with respect to which the integral is taken, is sometimes indicated by writing the letter designating it at the right hand below; as, $\int_x \phi$; that is, the integral of ϕ with respect to x.

Σ Sum; algebraic sum; the sum of all terms such as; thus, when three quantities, a, b, and c, are spoken of, $\Sigma\, ab = ab + ac + bc$; that is, $\Sigma\, ab$ is the sum of all the terms that can be formed of a, b, and c of the same kind as ab. When Σ is used to indicate the sum or summation of finite differences, it has a sense somewhat like that of the symbol $\int$; as, $\Sigma\, n^2 = 1^2 + 2^2 + 3^2 \ldots + n^2$.

π or Π Product; the continued product of all terms such as; as when three quantities a, b, and c are spoken of, $\Pi\,(a + b) = (a + b)\,(b + c)\,(c + a)$; that is, $\Pi\,(a + b)$ is the product of all the terms formed of the same kind as $a + b$. The limits of the products to be taken are indicated as in the symbol $\int$ by figures or letters placed near the top or bottom of the symbol; as, $\prod_2^4\left(1 + \frac{1}{n}\right) = \left(1 + \frac{1}{2}\right)\left(1 + \frac{1}{3}\right)\left(1 + \frac{1}{4}\right)$.

$(\between)$ A symbol used in abbreviations of quantics whose terms have the same numerical coefficients as a corresponding expression formed by involution; as, $(a,b,c,d \between x,y)^3$, which denotes the quantic $ax^3 + 3bx^2y + 3cxy^2 + dy^3$, the numerical coefficients of which are the same as those obtained by expanding $(x + y)^3$.

$(\between)$ A symbol for a quantic which has no numerical coefficients; as, $(a,b,c,d \between x,y)^3$, which denotes the quantic $ax^3 + bx^2y + cxy^2 + dy^3$. See QUANTIC.

E A sign for replacing x by $x + 1$; as $E(x^2) = (x + 1)^2$.

sn u, cn u, dn u Elementary Jacobian elliptic functions. See ELLIPTIC FUNCTION.

Li(z) or li z A symbol equivalent to $\int_0^z \frac{dt}{\log t}$, in which t is the variable of integration and z is the upper limit.

NOTE. — Many other symbols are used in higher mathematics but they are beyond the scope of a general dictionary.

VECTOR ANALYSIS

Vectors to be indicated in printed matter by letters in boldface type; as, A; and in written manuscript by letters modified by a bar above (or by the doubling of some part of the character); as $\bar{\mathbf{A}}$, vector A. The magnitude of a vector to be indicated in print by the corresponding italic letter, and in manuscript (when necessary) by the use of the absolute value signs, | | or [ ]; as [A], the absolute value of A.

A · B or (AB) or S AB Scalar product of the vectors A and B.

A × B or [AB] or V AB Vector product of the vectors A and B.

i, j, k Unit vectors along the axes (right-handed system).

q Quaternion.

T_q Tensor of a quaternion. See QUATERNION, 5.

U_q Versor of a quaternion.

$\mathscr{S}$ The line integral of the tangential component of the vector field around the closed curve

$\mathscr{S}$ Integration of a quaternion.

TRANSFINITE NUMBERS

$\aleph_0$, $\aleph_1$, $\aleph_2$, etc. Transfinite cardinals.

ω_1, ω_2, ω_3, etc. Transfinite ordinals.

m/n Spanish moneda nacional, national money; — used in Latin American countries for the national paper money.

m$n Peso or pesos of national paper money.

Ç Colon.

Kč Koruna.

¥ or ₩ Yen.

Origins. — The origin of $ has been variously accounted for; but it has been shown (by Florian Cajori) from early manuscripts to be the result of evolution, independently in different places, of the Mexican sign P$ for pesos or piastres or pieces of eight by lowering of the letter s upon the letter p. Written after numerals by Spanish Americans and before numerals, like £, by English colonists, it was widely used before the adoption of the United States dollar in 1785. The sign / is thought to have been originally a capital S (written thus, ʃ), standing for the word shillings. The character £, for pounds sterling, is merely a capital L with a mark drawn across it, and represents the corresponding Latin word Libræ.

Fractions and Multiples. — Many countries use the decimal system to indicate fractional parts of the basic coin. For example, in the United States a period separates the basic coin from its hundredth part; as, $5.98, five dollars and ninety-eight cents. Most countries use the comma (and some only a space) to separate the basic coin from its fractional part. Some place the symbol ($) between the basic coin and its fraction; as, in Brazil 2$356, two milreis and three hundred fifty-six reis. Some use the colon to separate the basic coin from a larger coin, its multiple; as, in Portugal, 8:245$27, eight contos, two hundred forty-five escudos, and twenty-seven centavos. The period is then used to separate thousand contos from contos. See CONTO.

MUSIC

Cross references in small capitals refer to entries in the main vocabulary.

PITCH AND INTERVALS

Among the many ways of representing successive pitches, the simplest is by means of the letters a, b, c, d, e, f, and g. For detailed explanation of this system and the vibration rates represented, see 4th PITCH, 19.

— between letters often indicates a whole step.

⌣ between letters often indicates a half step.

+ between letters often indicates a step and a half. See SCALE.

A simple interval between two tones is sometimes represented, esp. in theoretical discussions, by the ratio between their vibration rates; as 2 : 1, an octave; 3 : 2 a fifth; 5 : 4, etc. See INTERVAL, n., 8.

For practical purposes, music is usually written with notes upon staffs.

Staff; — the five lines which, together with their attendant spaces, are used to represent pitches. The extent of the staff may be increased either above or below by the addition of short lines called ledger lines. The lines and spaces of the staff are often referred to as degrees. See KEYBOARD, 1.

G Clef. F Clef. C Clef.

Clefs; — characters placed upon the staff to designate the pitches to be represented by its lines and spaces. The G clef specifically causes the second line to represent g′ and by inference we understand that the space above this second line represents a′; the line above, b′, etc. In the same way the F clef causes the fourth line to represent F. The C clef was formerly found in several different positions, any line or space on which it was placed representing c′ (middle C). The C clef is now found only on the first, third, and fourth lines, being referred to respectively as soprano clef, alto clef, and tenor clef. See CLEF.

♯ Sharp; — a character causing any degree of the staff on which it is placed or with which it is associated to represent a pitch a half step higher than it otherwise would.

♭ Flat; — a character causing any degree of the staff on which it is placed or with which it is associated to represent a pitch a half step lower than it otherwise would.

The sharps or flats placed at the beginning of a composition or of one of its sections are called collectively its key signature.

Major:	C♭	G♭	D♭	A♭	E♭	B♭	F	C	G	D	A	E	B	F♯	C♯
Minor:	a♭	e♭	b♭	f	c	g	d	a	e	b	f♯	c♯	g♯	d♯	a♯

♮ Natural or Cancel; — a character which annuls the effect of a previous sharp or flat. When used in a key signature, a sharp (♯) or flat (♭) affects all octaves, including ledger lines and spaces throughout the piece, or until canceled by a natural (♮); but when used as an accidental, it affects only the one degree and only in the measure in which the symbol occurs, unless a note affected by this sign is tied to a note or notes of a succeeding measure or measures.

The natural (♮) affects only one degree and only for one measure, except when it is used to indicate a change in the key signature.

× or ※ Double sharp; — a character which causes the staff degree on which it is placed to represent a pitch one whole step higher than it would in its unaltered state.

♭♭ Double flat; — a character which causes the staff degree on which it is placed to represent a pitch one whole step lower than it would in its unaltered state.

♮♯ Single sharp, as used after double sharp. In modern notation a ♯ is often used without the ♮ to accomplish this same end.

♮♭ Single flat, as used after double flat. (See ♮♯ above).

8 Placed above a note, this means that the note an octave above is to be sounded with the note written; placed below, that the note an octave below is to be sounded with it.

8va. . . . . All' ottava; — at the octave. When above the staff it indicates that the tone or tones are to be sounded an octave higher than written; when below the staff that they are to be an octave lower.

coll' 8. . . . Coll' ottava (kŏl·lŏt·tä·vä); — with the octave (same as 8va.).

For less common methods of indicating pitch see (at the end of this article) Tonic Sol-fa Notation and Shaped Notes.

𝄐 or ∼ Custos, or direct: — a mark sometimes put at the end of a line or page to show the position of the first note on the next.

TIME AND RHYTHM

{ Brace joining several staffs indicates that the music written on them belongs together and is performed simultaneously.

Bar; — a vertical line across the staff, dividing it into measures. (The word bar is often used colloquially for measure; as, a phrase of four bars.)

Double Bars.

Double bar; — two vertical lines across the staff. The double bar is used to mark the end of a division, movement, or entire composition. The form numbered (3) is also used when there is a change of key or of measure signature in the midst of a composition. The single heavy bar in hymn tunes, often marks the end of a verse or sentence chorals, etc.

Different kinds of notes shown in the upper part of the illustration below indicate relative duration of tone; and the different kinds of rests shown immediately below the notes indicate relative duration of silence (of a particular instrument or voice).

Breve Whole Half Quarter Eighth Sixteenth Thirty-second Sixty-fourth

Thus ♪ would indicate a tone twice as long as 𝅘𝅥𝅯 but only half as long as ♩, for every hook (cross stroke) added to a note or rest cuts its time value in half. When several eighth notes, sixteenth notes, etc. appear together, their stems are often joined thus ♫. ♬, etc.

dotted notes.

double-dotted notes.

triple-dotted notes.

Dots after notes (or rests) increase their duration value, the single dot adding one half the value of the note after which it is placed, the double dot adding three quarters, and the triple dot, seven eighths. Thus

Tie. Enharmonic tie.

Tie; — a short curved line connecting the heads of two notes that call for the same tone. It indicates that one continuous tone, having a duration equal to the combined value of both notes, is to be sounded.

3 5 7 etc. are marks placed over irregular groups of notes and are used to indicate that three, five, seven, etc. notes (all equal) are to be performed (in general) in the time of two, four, six, etc., notes of the same kind respectively. For example:

$\frac{4}{4}$ $\frac{3}{4}$ $\frac{2}{4}$ $\frac{6}{8}$ etc. Measure signs or Time signatures; — indicate measure content, the upper figure showing in general the number of beats in each measure, the lower one, what kind of a note has a beat.

𝄴 = $\frac{4}{4}$

Tempo marks; — indicating respectively that 80 quarter notes, 66 half notes, or 88 dotted quarter notes are to be performed in one minute. The abbreviation M.M. (which is now often omitted) refers to Maelzel's metronome, an instrument for indicating the tempo. See METRONOME, METRONOMIC MARK.

𝄐 Pause; — indicates that the note or rest over which it is placed is to be prolonged (in general without rhythm) at the pleasure of the performer. It is sometimes placed over the double bar at the close to denote that this point is the end of the composition. For a different meaning, see Repetitions, below.

𝄑 Pause; — placed under a note. See 𝄐 above.

REPETITIONS

Repeat marks; — indicate that a passage is to be played twice. If there is no other mark, repeat from the beginning.

Either of these symbols marks the beginning of a passage to be repeated. They are nearly always used in conjunction with the repeat marks above, and indicate that only the passage between them is to be repeated.

𝄋 Segno (sign) sometimes marks either the beginning or the end of a passage to be repeated, and sometimes indicates where successive voice parts are to take up the theme.

+ or ※ Presa; — indicates where successive voice parts are to take up the theme.

𝄊 Marks the beginning of a passage to be repeated.

N

𝄐 or ⊕ Sometimes marks the end of a passage to be repeated.

D.C. Da capo; — repeat from the beginning of the composition (or movement) to the word fine, or to the 𝄐 or ⊕.

D.S. Dal segno; — repeat from the sign (𝄋 or 𝄌) to the word fine, or to the 𝄐 or ⊕. See AL SEGNO.

or Slur; — a curved line used for several quite different purposes, viz.: (1) as a phrase mark; (2) to indicate legato; (3) in vocal music to show that two or more notes belong to one syllable of text.

Staccato marks; — indicate that the tones are to be given only a fractional part of the note value; that is, they are to be performed in detached fashion. The indicates a sharper staccato than the or Nonlegato marks; — indicate that the tones are to be detached, but not as sharply so as in staccato.

ppp Double pianissimo; — as soft as possible.
pp Pianissimo; — very soft.
p Piano; — soft.
mp Mezzo piano; — moderately soft.
mf Mezzo forte; — moderately loud.
f Forte; — loud.
ff Fortissimo; — very loud.
fff Double fortissimo; — as loud as possible.
fp Forte-piano; — loud then immediately soft.

Rf, rfz, or rinf. Rinforzando; — reinforced; an entire passage to be louder than the preceding one.

Crescendo; — indicates that the volume of sound is to be gradually increased.

Decrescendo or Diminuendo; — indicates that the volume of sound is to be gradually diminished.

Swell; — indicates a gradual increase or crescendo followed by a gradual decrease or decrescendo.

R

Accent marks; — indicate that a tone or chord is to be given a certain additional amount of stress, the quantity depending upon circumstances. See RHYTHM.

Tenuto mark; — indicates that a note is to be held to its full value.

Sf, Sfz, Fz, Sf, and Sfz are abbreviations for sforzando; fz for forzando.

ORNAMENTS, or GRACES

Certain ornaments or graces are indicated by signs, the interpretation of which varies considerably. The examples here given can therefore obviously be only general ones and no attempt is made to cover all cases. For fuller explanations see each term in the vocabulary.

Arpeggio; — indicates that the tones of a chord are to be sounded consecutively instead of simultaneously, beginning with the lowest tone and proceeding upward in regular order, all tones being sustained until the duration value of the chord has expired.

tr Trill or Shake; — indicates the rapid alternation of the principal tone with the one next above it in the diatonic scale. It often ends with a turn.

Written Played

Long appoggiatura; — an embellishing note a degree above or below the principal note. The accent falls on the grace, which is as long as or longer than the principal tone in duration. See APPOGGIATURA.

U

Short appoggiatura or acciaccatura; — written with a stroke across it, and performed very quickly.

Written Played

Double appoggiatura; — a grace of two notes, one being a degree above, the other a degree below the principal note.

Written Played

Mordent; — a grace of three tones: (1) the principal tone; (2) the one next below it in the scale; (3) the principal tone again; the first two are performed as quickly as possible, and the accent falls on the third.

Written Played

Pralltriller; — same as mordent except that the second tone is the one above instead of the one below.

W

or

Double mordent.

or

Turn; — a grace consisting of four tones: (1) the one above the principal tone; (2) the principal tone; (3) the one below the principal tone; (4) the principal tone.

or

Inverted turn; — a grace of four tones like the turn but beginning with the tone below instead of the tone above.

Written Played

When the sign is placed a little to the right of the note the principal tone is sounded first, followed by the four tones of the turn in regular order.

Turn after note.

NOTE. — If ♯, ♭, or ♮ is written over any of the graces above described, it is understood to affect the degree above the printed note: if written below the sign it affects the degree below the printed note

Z

ABBREVIATIONS

In order to facilitate both the printing (or copying) and the reading of music, certain abbreviations are in common use, especially in ensemble music. Those most frequently encountered follow:

When some part or voice is to rest for from two to eight measures this is often indicated as follows:

A rest of a number of measures is also often indicated in one of the following ways:

TECHNIQUE OF PERFORMANCE

D.M. Destra mano [It.]; — use the right hand.
M.D. Mano destra [It.] or main droite [F.]; — use the right hand.
M.S. Mano sinistra [It.] } — use the left hand.
M.G. Main gauche [F.] }
L.H. Left hand.
R.H. Right hand.

or Pedal signs; — refer to the depression and release of the damper pedal in piano music.

Ped. or P. Depress the damper pedal.

✱ Release the damper pedal.

or or ∧ Down-bow signs; — in music for stringed instruments.

∨ Up-bow sign; — in music for stringed instruments.

° Harmonic sign, indicating that the note over which it is placed is to be played as a harmonic. See HARMONIC, 1 b.

, or ✓ or * Breathing mark used esp. in vocal music to show where the performer should take breath.

HARMONY

° Diminished; — indicates, when used in connection with a small numeral, that the chord represented is a diminished one, thus II° or 7°.

+ or ′ Augmented; — indicates, when used in connection with a large numeral, that the chord represented is an augmented one, thus III+ or III′.

6 6 / 5 4 / 2 etc. Thorough bass, or figured bass, figures; — indicate when accompanying a bass part, the harmony of the upper parts. See THOROUGH BASS.

TONIC SOL-FA NOTATION

Tonic sol-fa notation; — uses no staff, key signature, or notes, but consists of the initial letters of the syllable names (do, re, mi, fa, sol, la, ti, do) placed horizontally. The key is indicated by a letter at the beginning; higher and lower octaves by marks above or below the initials; measures by bars, as in staff notation; beats are separated by colons, divided beat is shown by the period, subdivided beat by the comma. A dash indicates a prolongation of the same tone; a blank space, a rest.

Example of tonic sol-fa notation:

Do is G { .s | d : d : d, r . m, f : s . d | r : —. m, f : m : —. s | etc.

The same in staff notation.

SHAPED NOTES, or PATENT NOTES

A modification of staff notation occasionally found in the United States, especially in the South, in the middle and latter part of the nineteenth century. The only change from staff notation involved is in the shape of the note heads, their characteristic patterns being designed to assist the eye in determining the scale names of the notes.

For certain symbols formerly used in music, see ELEVATION; NEUME, Table; MINIM; BREVE; SEMIQUAVER.

PHYSICS, ENGINEERING, WEIGHTS, AND MEASURES

Modern physics and engineering, being largely quantitative in method, reduce nearly all laws to mathematical formulation, and hence employ all the symbols used in Mathematics (see Mathematics, above) besides a wide variety of special symbols most of which fall into two classes, viz.: (1) schematized drawings of apparatus (for examples see Electricity and Radio, above) and (2) letters (chiefly Roman and Greek), often modified by subscripts and superscripts. No attempt can here be made to cover all the conventionalized drawings that have been or may be used with symbolic significance. Even the usage of letter symbols varies widely, the same letter often having many possible meanings, or the same meaning having two or three symbols. Most letter symbols are essentially abbreviations, but there is an increasing tendency to drop the period, especially where the abbreviation consists of a single letter, and to adopt distinctive styles of type to distinguish different meanings. Organized efforts to attain uniformity have met with increasing success, but are counterbalanced by invention and discovery which multiply the need of additional symbols and the possibility of giving new meanings to symbols already in use. Authors should therefore indicate the exact sense in which they intend to employ each symbol, and should avoid using the same symbol in different senses without distinguishing these senses, as by superscripts and subscripts. For any given concept, the same symbol should of course be used throughout. Letter subscripts should be used to denote values under special conditions or in special states. A double letter subscript without comma should be used to denote a value or change between two conditions or states. Numerical subscripts should be used to denote temperatures and other values at designated points in an apparatus, process, or cycle. A double numerical subscript should be used to denote a value or change of a value between two points. Wherever possible, capital letters should be used to denote total quantities and small letters specific quantities, or quantities per unit.

Many of the symbols used in Chemistry (which see in this appendix) are used in Physics in identical meanings; as H^2, the hydrogen isotope of mass 2. Others are modifications of chemical symbols. For example, arc spectra are designated by the symbol for the chemical element (see ELEMENT, Table, in the Vocabulary) and the Roman numeral I; as, Cu I, the arc spectrum of copper. Spark spectra are designated by the symbol of the element and a Roman numeral indicating the number of outer electrons lost by the atom; as, Cu II; Cu III.

Applied physics and engineering have developed highly specialized subdivisions each with its own special symbols. See Aeronautics, Electricity and Magnetism, above, for the principal symbols used in these fields; only a few of the most important are given here. The examples below, taken chiefly from other branches of physics and engineering are merely illustrative, not exhaustive. Vocabulary definitions of the words below are variously labeled Physics, Mechanics, Civil Engineering, Dynamics, Thermodynamics, Hydraulics, Photometry, Electricity, etc., and many are not labeled. Some of the phrases are not entered in the vocabulary but are sufficiently covered by the separate words.

a Linear acceleration; aerodynamic; van der Waals's volume constant.
A Area; ampere; ammeter; angstrom unit; water equivalent; amplitude.
$\mathring{A}$ Angstrom unit.
b Specific breadth; van der Waals's pressure constant.
B British thermal units; brightness; brake; total breadth; magnetic flux density; Baumé.
°B Degrees Baumé.
C Centigrade scale of temperature; concentration; conductance; capacitance; coulomb; candle; capacity; velocity of light in space; coefficients and constants (usually with a subscript).
°C Degrees Centigrade.
c Critical point; specific heat; concrete; compressive; center; chord; neutral axis; candle; velocity of light.
C_g Center-of-gravity coefficient.
cm Centimeter, centimeters.
cm^{-1} Per centimeter.
cm^2 Square centimeter or centimeters.
cm^{-2} Per square centimeter.
cm^3 Cubic centimeter or centimeters.
C_p Power coefficient.
c_p Specific heat at constant pressure.
c_v Specific heat at constant volume.
D Diameter; density; differential; drop cord; drag; yellow lines in the spectrum of sodium; least distance of distinct vision.
d Depth; density; thickness.
d_4^{20} Density at 20°C as compared to that of water at 4° C. d_{15}^{15} Density at 15°C as compared to that of water at 15°C.
dkm Decameter or decameters.
dkm^2 Square decameter or decameters.
dkm^3 Cubic decameter or decameters.
dm Decimeter.
dm^{-1} Per decimeter.
dm^2 Square decimeter.
dm^3 Cubic decimeter.
E Energy; Young's modulus of elasticity intensity of electrostatic field; elbow; extension; illumination; electromotive force; electric potential.
e Efficiency; effective eccentricity; elementary electrical charge.
e_h Hydraulic efficiency.
e_m Mechanical efficiency.
e_t Thermal efficiency.
e_v Volumetric efficiency.
F Force; concentrated load; Fahrenheit scale of temperature; farad; fire alarm; flux or light; free energy; Faraday.
°F. Degrees Fahrenheit.
f Frequency; friction; coefficient of sliding friction; fluid; saturated liquid at saturation pressure and temperature; liquid in contact with vapor; force; stress.
f_c Unit concrete stress in reinforced concrete.
f_s Unit steel stress in reinforced concrete.
G Galvanometer; mass velocity; conductance; gap; constant of gravitation.
g Gravity; constant of gravitation; gas; dry saturated gas at saturation pressure and temperature; vapor in contact with liquid; unit conductance; gram or grams.
g_L Local value of acceleration due to gravity.
g_0 International standard acceleration due to gravity. See GRAVITY, n., 5 a.
H Hamiltonian function; head; heat content; henry; intensity of magnetic field.
h Height; altitude; hydraulic; head; loss of head; heat content per unit weight; coefficient of heat transfer; heat of vaporization at constant pressure; henry; Planck's constant.
h_f Heat content of saturated liquid.
h_g Heat content of dry, saturated gas or vapor.
hm Hectometer, hectometers.
hm^2 Square hectometer or hectometers.
hm^3 Cubic hectometer or hectometers.
h_0 Velocity head of approach.
h_p Pressure head.
HP Horsepower.
h_v Velocity head.
H_e Intensity of the magnetic field of the earth; horizontal component of the earth's magnetic field.
H_α A certain line in the hydrogen spectrum.
H_β Another line in the hydrogen spectrum.
$h\nu$ Quantum.
I Inertia; rectangular moment of inertia; intensity; candle power; current; radioactivity.
i Angle of incidence.
J Junction; polar moment of inertia; mechanical equivalent of heat; joule; intensity.
$J\lambda$ Intensity of light of wave length λ (lambda).
j Joule; inner quantum number; unit vector along y axis.
K Kelvin (absolute) scale of temperature; centuple, or rational, calorie (see CALORIE); visibility factor; modulus of elasticity; dielectric constant; a certain spectral series; a certain energy level in the atom.
°K Degree Kelvin.
k Specific heat ratio; thermal conductivity; radius of gyration; dielectric constant; susceptibility to magnetism.
kB One thousand British thermal units.
km Kilometer, kilometers.
km^2 Square kilometer or kilometers.
km^3 Cubic kilometer or kilometers.
L Length; local; lambert; lift; latent heat; heat of vaporization at constant pressure; kinetic potential; torque; inductance; a certain spectral series; a certain energy level in the atom.
l Length; also, any linear dimension, as thickness; lumen or lumens; liter or liters.
lb or ℔ Pound or pounds (from the Latin libra pound).
M Mass; molecular weight; moment of a force; mutual inductance; modulus (when used with a subscript).
m Mean; mechanical; meridional; mass; a certain spectral series; a certain energy level in the atom; melts at; meter or meters.
m_0 Rest mass of a particle, particularly the electron.
m^2 Square meter or meters.
m^3 Cubic meter or meters.
$m\mathring{A}$ Milliangstrom.
m_e Mass of an electron.
m_h Mass of a hydrogen atom.
m_p Mass of a proton.
MB One million British thermal units.
mm Millimeter.
mm^{-1} Per millimeter.
mm^2 Square millimeter or millimeters.
mm^3 Cubic millimeter or millimeters.
MW Megawatt.
N Number; rate; number of molecules per gram molecule; normal.
n Number; number of gas molecules per cc at standard conditions; frequency; revolutions per minute, or other specified unit of time; speed ratio between the modulus of elasticity of steel and the modulus of elasticity of concrete; load factor; index of refraction; principal quantum number.
n_1 Number per unit; revolutions per minute (or other specified unit of time) at one-foot head (see HEAD, 16).
n_s Specific, or characteristic, speed.
O Zero; starting point; assumed standard; center of rotation; pint.
P Permeance.
P Power; horsepower; pressure.
p Pressure; pitch; steel ratio in reinforced concrete beams; frequency.
P_1 Power of turbine under one-foot head.
P_b Power at brake.
P_w Power from water.
Q Quantity; usually, total quantity, as of heat, light, or electricity; torque; statical moment of any area about a given axis.
q Quantity per unit; esp., quantity of heat transferred per unit time, or thermal transmission; quantity of electricity.
R Resistance; radius; resultant force; rupture; modulus of rupture; reaction; receptacle; remote; Reaumur scale of temperature; gas constant; Rydberg constant.
°R Degrees Reaumur.
r Radius; radial component; unit resistance; rate; angle of reflection; angle of refraction.
S Slope; modulus of a section; stress; switch; surface, or area; entropy.
s Shear; stere; unit stress; linear distance; entropy per unit mass; steel.
S_c Unit compressive stress.
sec. Second; per second.
sec.$^{-2}$ Per second per second.
s_s Unit shear.
s_t Unit tensile stress.
T Temperature, specif., absolute temperature; time; torque; period, esp. of harmonic motion; tee; terminal; thrust; total tensile stress or total steel stress in reinforced concrete; surface tension; kinetic energy.
t Time; temperature, esp., ordinary temperature; thermal; tensile.
t Ton, tons.
U Internal energy; thermal transmittance per unit area; mobility.
u Circumferential velocity; velocity component along the x axis; thermal parameter; intrinsic, or internal, energy per unit weight; force in any bar of a framed structure due to a load of unity applied at any point in any direction.
V Velocity (linear); volume, esp., total volume; voltage, esp. total voltage; volt or volts; voltmeter; total shear stress; potential energy.
v Volt; unit voltage; unit velocity; relative velocity, as of water to a runner or impeller; volume per unit, esp. per unit weight; unit shear stress of concrete; thermal parameter.
v_i Indicated velocity.
V_m Meridional component of absolute velocity.
V_0 Velocity of approach.
V_r Radial component of absolute velocity.
V_u Circumferential or tangential components of absolute velocity.
W Weight, esp. total weight; occasionally, weight per unit time; work, esp. total work; energy; watt or watts; wattmeter; water.
W Weight per unit, esp., weight per unit volume or unit time; work per unit; watt or watts.
W_1 A certain energy state in the atom.
W_2 An energy state in the atom.
X Unknown; total reactance.
x Unknown; unit reactance; longitudinal displacement.
y Deflection; admittance; second unknown; lateral displacement.
Z Modulus of a section; relative viscosity; impedance; atomic number.
Z Elevation head (see HEAD, n., 16); potential head; unit impedance; third unknown; normal displacement.

SYMBOLS BASED ON GREEK LETTERS USED IN PHYSICS AND ENGINEERING

NOTE. — Those that have the same form as Roman letters are not given here, but are included in the list above.

α Angular acceleration; degree of dissociation into ions; coefficient of linear expansion; coefficient of absorption; observed angle of optical rotation (see POLARIZATION, 2); temperature coefficient.
$[\alpha]$ Specific rotatory power.
$[\alpha_m]$ Molecular rotation.
β Coefficient of pressure change of a gas; ratio of the velocity of a body to the velocity of light.
γ Dihedral angle; conductivity; surface tension; ionization; microgram; a unit of intensity of magnetic field, 0.000 01 gauss (see GAUSS).
Δ Increment; deflection of a panel point of a truss; coefficient of diffusion; lowering of freezing point.
δ Unit elongation; angle of set of control surfaces of an airplane.
ϵ Electrode potential; dielectric constant.
ϵ_c Potential above a normal calomel electrode.
ϵ_h Potential above a normal hydrogen electrode.
η Efficiency; viscosity.
Θ Temperature; — used only when t has some other meaning.
θ Angular distance; temperature in degrees above 0° C; Curie point; angle between direction of view and the normal to a surface; angular phase difference.
κ Specific heat ratio; modulus of elasticity; susceptibility to magnetism.
Λ Equivalent conductivity.
λ Wave length; angstrom unit; area ratio; cosmical constant; damping coefficient; latitude; microliter; radioactive constant.
λ_m Wave length of maximum radiance of a black body at a stated temperature.
μ Micron or microns; permeability; molar conductance; modulus (used with a specifying subscript); coefficient of viscosity; index of refraction.
μ^2 Square micron.
μ^3 Cubic micron.
$\mu\mathring{A}$ Microangstrom.
μg Microgram.
$m\mu$ Millimicron; micromillimeter.
$\mu\mu$ Micromicron; — formerly used also for millimicron.
ν Kinematic viscosity; reluctivity; frequency.
π Osmotic pressure.
Π Pressure.
ρ Radius of curvature; density; coefficient of reflection; resistivity; refractive power.
σ Standard deviation; surface tension; density relative to standard air density; current density; charge density; resistivity (see sense 3, in Vocabulary); one thousandth of a second.
τ Transmission factor; time (used only when t has some other meaning); volume; temperature.
Φ Radiant flux; magnetic flux; farad.
ϕ Phase; angular phase difference; peripheral speed; potential.
Ψ Dielectric flux.
$\psi\psi$ Wave function.
ω Angular velocity; angular frequency; solid angle.

PROOFREADERS' MARKS, AND MARKS USED IN PREPARING COPY

or or (L. dele). Dele, or Delete; take out, or expunge.
or Turn a reversed letter.
∧ or > caret. Insert at this point.
Move the word or letters encircled to the point indicated by the caret.
or # Space, or more space, as between words, letters, or lines.
∨∧ or ∨ Space evenly; — usually used within the text.
Eq. # Equalize space; space evenly; — used in the margin.
⌒ Print as a ligature, or single character; thus, æ, fl (i.e., print æ, ff).
∨ or ⌣ Less space.
⊂ Close up entirely; no space. Sometimes, merely less space.
Take out a letter or character and close up.

N

⌊ or ⌈ or [Carry farther to the left.

⌋ or ⌉ or] Carry farther to the right.

↗ or ⌋ Placed after a word or syllable at the beginning of a line, indicates that it is to be transposed to the line preceding.

S or ⌈ Placed near the end of a line indicates that the letters partly enclosed are to be carried over to the next line.

⊢ Elevate a letter, word, or character that is sunk below the proper level.

□ Em quad space; also, indent one em.

□□ Indent two ems.

□□□ Indent three ems.

$\frac{1}{\text{en}}$| or en En dash.

‖ or | Straighten ends of lines that are ragged.

⊥ or ⊥ Directs attention to a quadrat or space which prints as a mark.

× or + or ⊗ Broken or imperfect type. This mark is placed in the margin, and the broken letters are underscored or marked with a ring.

[Bring a word or words to the beginning of a line; also, make a new paragraph.

≡ or /// or \\\ Straighten (a crooked line or lines).

no ¶ No paragraph; continue the same paragraph.

○ Spell out; — used in text, to encircle an undesired abbreviation or figure. Sometimes placed around a word that is spelled out to indicate that it is to be abbreviated.

!/ Exclamation point.

?/ Interrogation point.

⊙ Period.

or ⋀ or '/ Comma.

: or ⊙ Colon.

; or ;/ Semicolon.

ψ or ⋁ Apostrophe or single quotation mark.

⋁ Double quotation mark.

- or /=/ or -/ Hyphen.

[/] Brackets.

(/) Parentheses.

^{s}/ or ^{s}/ or ^{s}/ Insert or replace with superior figure, character, or letter.

$_{2}$/ or $_{2}$/ Insert or replace with inferior figure, character, or letter.

— Put in italic; also, change according to the mark in the margin, as from italic to roman, or from roman to italic. The line is drawn in the text under the letter, word, or words, to be changed.

ital. Italic; — used in the margin.

rom. Roman; — used in the margin.

bf. Bold-faced type; — used in the margin.

〰〰 Bold-faced type; — used in the text.

or tr. Transpose. The sign is ordinarily written around the words or letters that are to be transposed, and the abbreviation tr. is written in the margin.

l.c. Lower case; that is, put in small, or common, letters a word or letter that has been printed in capitals or small capitals. Diagonal lines are drawn through the letters that are to be so changed.

=, S.C., s. caps., or sm.c. Put in small capitals.

≡ or caps. Put in capitals.

| A vertical line at the left indicates that this part of the copy is to be set in smaller type than the rest. Two lines indicate still smaller type.

stet. .... Restore or retain words which have been crossed out; stet is usually written in the margin, and the dots under the words show which are to be kept.

out, s. c. Words are omitted, or are wanting, see copy.

(?), (?), Qu., or Qy. Query. Is this right? Verify. Used chiefly on author's proofs.

tr. Transpose.

For an explanation of the various purposes for which these marks or points are used, see their names in the Vocabulary. Where the same word has several meanings, the sense here intended is usually labeled Print, or Gram. See also REFERENCE MARK.

Origins. — The interrogation point is said by Bilderdijk to have been formed from the first and last letters of the Latin word Quaestio, question, placed one over the other; thus, ɋ. According to the same authority, the note of exclamation was formed from the Latin word Io, joy, written vertically; thus, ɪ. The circumflex accent (^, ⌒, or ~) is formed by joining the grave and the acute. The cedilla (¸) was originally the same as the letter z, and was written, in Spanish and French, between the letter c and a following a, o, or u, to preserve the c in its soft sound. Afterward it was placed under the c, and acquired the character of a mere diacritical point. The section (§) is said by some to have been formed from the initial letters (ſſ) of the Latin words signum sectionis, meaning sign of the section; but others assert that it is a corruption of a Greek π, the first letter of the word παράγραφος, which means a marginal line or stroke.

SHIPS AND SHIPPING

A 1 The designation of a first-class vessel in Lloyd's Register; the letter denoting that the hull is well built and seaworthy, and the figure the efficient state of the rigging, anchors, stores, etc. The figure 2 would imply that these were insufficient in quantity, or of an inferior quality. When a vessel has passed the age for the character A (four to fifteen years), it is registered A in red.

Æ The designation of a vessel of the third class, fit to convey perishable goods on short voyages only.

E The designation of a vessel fit for carrying on a voyage of any length such goods only as are not liable to sea damage.

I The designation of a vessel fit for carrying goods of the same sort on shorter voyages only.

M C Letters used to indicate that the boilers and machinery of a steam vessel have been inspected, and found to be in good order and safe working condition.

Broad Arrow; a British government mark, stamped, cut, or otherwise fixed, on solid materials used in the royal ships or dockyards, in order to prevent embezzlement of naval stores; also used by British customs officers.

⊠ or ⊻ Dead flat; the largest transverse section of a vessel. See DEAD FLAT 2; PLIMSOLL MARK.

Most of the above symbols are international.

An exponent added to a symbol indicates degree of intensity; as, ^{0} light rain; ^{1} moderate rain; ^{2} heavy rain. The exponent 1 is not ordinarily used in English-speaking countries; and moderate or medium intensity is usually meant when a symbol is used with no exponent. See also WIND SCALE, in the Vocabulary.

FORMS OF ADDRESS

An exhaustive list of all alternative FORMS OF ADDRESS permissible in polite correspondence would extend far beyond the scope of this Dictionary; especially in informal correspondence, there is a great variety of possible salutations. In the table below, we have usually put the most formal address and salutation first. Differences of local usage, however, inevitably introduce many exceptions. In the United States, "My dear Mrs. Smith" is more formal than "Dear Mrs. Smith"; in Great Britain, the reverse is true. In business correspondence, the addressee's address is placed before the salutation; in most official and some social correspondence, it is placed at the foot of the letter, below and to the left of the signature. Social invitations to a married man are customarily addressed to the man and his wife; as, Senator and Mrs. ——; The President and Mrs. ——; Lord and Lady ——; Their Excellencies, the German Ambassador and Madam ——; etc.

It will be noted that some of the addresses given below begin with the word "To," whereas most do not. There is no hard and fast rule. We have tried to suggest merely the more customary usage. Insertion or omission of the word "To" is optional. It will also be noted that the same word may be spelled differently according to the residence of the persons addressed. For example, in the United States the spellings honor and honorable are preferred; but in Great Britain, honour and honourable. In the address, abbreviations are commonly used but they should never be used in the salutation, or beginning of a letter.

* Such salutations as My Lord, Your Lordship, etc., are not ordinarily used in the United States of America, but should be used by an American writing to dignitaries of foreign countries entitled to such a title or mark of respect.

† When the person addressed holds several titles, as one from birth, another by marriage, and another by profession, always employ the highest title.

‡ Clerical, naval, and military prefixes are written before other titles; initials indicative of distinction are written after the title and name; an officer should be addressed by his official title when the communication refers to official business.

Abbot
Address: The Right Reverend ——, O.S.B. (or other initials of the order), Abbot of ——; or The Right Rev. Abbot ——.

Begin: My Lord.

Viscountess
Address: The Right Honourable the Viscountess ——; or The Viscountess ——.
Begin: Madam.

Viscount's children. Same as Baron's children.

Widow
Ordinarily address by her former title: as, Mrs. John Paul Smith, not Mrs. Mary Alice Smith, unless the latter form is preferred by the person herself; but if her married son, stepson, or grandson now holds a title of nobility formerly held by her late husband, the word Dowager may be added before (or after) her title to distinguish her from the younger lady of the same title; as, Her Grace the Dowager Duchess of ——; The Dowager Lady ——. When such relationship does not exist, distinguish by using the widow's Christian name; as, The Right Honourable Helen, Countess of ——. The latter form is now generally preferred by ladies entitled to the distinction Dowager. Officially, a widow who remarries is not recognized as having any claim to bear the title of her deceased husband, but courtesy usually accords her this title.

A PRONOUNCING GAZETTEER

AND

INTRODUCTION

THE symbols used in the respelling for pronunciation in the GAZETTEER and BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY are the same as those employed in the body of the book, a full explanation of which will be found in the GUIDE TO PRONUNCIATION.

Where two or more places or persons having a name identically spelled are listed, the pronunciation is usually given with the first only, if it is the same for each. The figures sometimes given with the respelling for pronunciation refer to sections in the GUIDE TO PRONUNCIATION.

In the pronunciation of names in English-speaking countries, the aim has been to give the best local usage, in so far as we were able to ascertain it. In the pronunciation of foreign names, we have usually given an Anglicized pronunciation where one exists or can safely be inferred. Usually the native pronunciation has been given in addition, as nearly as a pronunciation alphabet not specifically designed for foreign languages permits.

The ascertaining of pronunciations has been a difficult task. Much information has been obtained from authoritative books, both English and foreign. Further information has been obtained: for foreign names, from specialists in various foreign languages (we alone, however, are responsible for the interpretation and representation of the information obtained from these specialists); for names of persons whose language is English, from correspondence with these persons themselves or with relatives, associates, or acquaintances; for place names in English-speaking countries, from correspondence with persons in the particular locality the pronunciation of whose name was desired.

ELEMENTS OF PRONUNCIATION OF FOREIGN NAMES

NOTE. In the following remarks it has been possible to describe only the more important sounds of the chief foreign languages. The descriptions of sounds that have no exact English equivalents are necessarily only approximate. In addition to giving information especially adapted to the names recorded in these dictionaries these rules are useful as an aid to the pronunciation of other names not included.

I. GENERAL OBSERVATIONS — ACCENTS, ETC.

§ 1. The number of syllables in a foreign name is usually to be determined by the number of vowels or diphthongs which it contains, except that doubled vowels generally belong to the same syllable.

In the following vocabularies, the number of syllables in a name is usually to be determined from the number of accents or centered periods, or of both together, in the respelling; thus the Polish name Sienkiewicz is pronounced in three syllables, shĕn·kyĕ′vĕch. However, a "syllable" that ends with an apostrophe (which in such position in the pronunciation of a foreign name indicates that the preceding consonant is voiceless, or, in the case of y, that the y is pronounced as consonant y and not ĭ) does not constitute an extra syllable in the normal, colloquial pronunciation of the language to which the name belongs. Example: French Ypres, pronounced ē′pr′ (one syllable).

§ 2. Every letter, or combination of letters, occurring in the respelling for pronunciation of a word or name, is to be pronounced with its proper sound as shown in the key line at the foot of the pages; e.g., ch is to be sounded as in chair, g as in get, etc.

§ 3. Accent (stress). Something analogous to English accent (Guide to Pron., §§ 60–64) is found in most languages. In the Teutonic tongues, especially, the accent is essentially the same as in English, a large number of the polysyllabic words having both the primary and secondary accent, as Son′ders·hau′sen, Zeis′ber′ger. It may be observed, however, that in none of the other languages, not even in the Teutonic, is the stress of voice thrown so strongly on a single syllable as it usually is in English; consequently, the unaccented syllables are almost invariably pronounced more distinctly than by us. This is an important point to be borne in mind by those who wish to speak foreign words or names correctly. One should be careful to pronounce each vowel, whether in an accented or an unaccented syllable, distinctly, if it is not expressly marked as obscure.

Among what may be termed the principal European languages (as English, French, German, Italian, Russian, and Spanish) there is scarcely one general rule for accent to which there are not many exceptions, and this is especially true of proper names. The rules of most general application are perhaps the following: —

In Danish, Dutch, German, and Swedish, the main accent is most often on the first syllable, as in English.

In French the marks called accents that are placed over the different vowels serve only to indicate some particular sound of these letters, and not stress of the voice. (Cf. â, é, ô, etc., under VOWELS.) It is commonly said that the French pronounce all the syllables of a word with an equal stress of voice, but that they seem to an English ear to accentuate the last, because in our language the universal tendency is to throw the accent toward the beginning of the word. For more detailed discussion of the stress in French, see the special article on French pronunciation in the Guide to Pron., § 272. In these lists, the principal accent has been placed on the last syllable of French names; at the same time it has been thought proper to mark the others with secondary accents, in order to prevent them from being pronounced too slightly or indistinctly. The pronunciation of Orléans, for example, has been represented ôr′lā′ăn′.

For rules of accentuation in Spanish and Italian, see the special articles on the pronunciation of these languages in the Guide to Pron., §§ 274–275.

In Portuguese, names ending in a vowel most often have the accent on the penult.

In Polish the accent is almost invariably on the penult.

In Hungarian and Czechoslovak the accent is always on the first syllable, no matter how long the word, but it is not so strong as to interfere with the lengths of following syllables, which are pronounced distinctly.

In Turkish the heaviest stress is usually on the last syllable.

In Japanese, Korean, and Siamese, stress is usually so nearly equal on all syllables that accent marks have been almost completely dispensed with in the respelled pronunciations.

In general, Chinese names consist of a succession of monosyllables, each with a distinct accent. Certain successions of two vowels, however, conventionally regarded as diphthongal and monosyllabic, are by some observers regarded as two separate vowels, and are so transcribed in the following vocabularies, thus: Hsien Fēng (shĭ·ĕn′ fŭng′).

A written acute accent indicates a long vowel in Hungarian and Czechoslovak. In Spanish it shows where the stress falls. In French it shows a particular quality of the vowel over which it is placed, as do also the other written accents.

§ 4. Doubled letters. A doubled vowel in Finnish and Estonian is longer in duration than the same vowel single, and there may also be a slight difference of quality. A doubled vowel in a closed syllable in German and Dutch is longer in duration than the same vowel single in the same position usually is, and in some cases there is also a difference of quality. Doubled consonants are pronounced long or doubled (as tt in English coattail) in Italian, Icelandic, Hungarian, Arabic, Japanese, and, usually, Swedish; otherwise they are usually pronounced as a single consonant, as in English (e.g., fatty, pronounced făt′ĭ). A doubled r in Spanish, Italian, etc., is pronounced as a long and strong trill, indicated by rr in the respelling. In Spanish, a single r has the same pronunciation in certain positions (e.g., when initial in a word).

§ 5. Final consonants. In German, Dutch, and the Slavic languages (except Yugoslav), b, d, g, v when occurring at the end of a word are not pronounced with their voiced sounds as in English, but are pronounced p, t, k (or ĸ), f, respectively. Likewise, z and zh (or ž) final are pronounced s and sh, respectively, in the Slavic languages (except Yugoslav). — Final consonants in French, except c, f, l, r (r, however, is usually silent in -er), are usually silent, but to this rule there are many exceptions, especially in proper names.

☞ For the pronunciation of names from Latin, classic Greek, and Hebrew, see Guide to Pron., §§ 269–271.

II. VOWELS, DIPHTHONGS, and VOWEL COMBINATIONS

§ 6. In general, the values of the vowels in the chief languages other than English are as follows: a, when long, is like a in art; when short it is like a in artistic or like a in ask as often pronounced in eastern New England. e, when long and close, is like a in fade; when long and open it is like a in care; when short and close it is like a in fade pronounced quickly; when short and open it is like e in met. i, when long, is like e in me; when short it is like e in event or like i in pin. o, when long and close, is like o in old; when long and open it is like o in orb; when short it is like o in obey, like o in orb pronounced quickly, or like o in odd as pronounced in southern England. u, when long, is like oo in pool; when short it is like oo in pool pronounced quickly, or like oo in book. — It should be carefully observed, however, that the English a as in ale and o as in old are diphthongal, more markedly so in British than in American English, the a as in ale ending in a vanishing sound like i in pin, the o in old ending in a vanishing sound like oo in book. In the foreign sounds, as in Spanish, Italian, French, or German, these vanishing sounds are entirely absent. The vowels a, o, e are often called strong; i, u, weak.

The pronunciation of French, German, Italian, and Spanish sounds is treated in the special articles on the pronunciation of these languages in the Guide to Pron., §§ 272–275, and is not repeated in the following.

§ 7. A, in most languages other than English, never has a sound like that in the English words fate or name, but is usually like the a in far or in artistic, as in Italian, German, and Spanish; or it is like the a in fast as often pronounced in eastern New England. — In Hungarian, a is about like o in hot as pronounced in southern England; á is like a in father. — Short a in Sanskrit and many East Indian names is like u in but or a in sofa.

ä in Swedish is like e in there or in met, or like a in bat.

â in Romanian is somewhat like i in frill.

ă in Romanian, when accented, is like an "r-dropper's" pronunciation of ur in fur; when unaccented, like a in sofa.

ą in Polish: see III.

å in Swedish is like o in go when long; like au in taut, pronounced quickly, when short.

ã in Portuguese: see III.

aa in Danish and Norwegian has a long sound similar in quality to that of aw in law. — In Dutch, aa is a long sound similar in quality to a in fast as often pronounced in eastern New England.

ae in Flemish is like aa in Dutch (see preceding paragraph). — ae in Icelandic and Welsh is similar to i in ice. — æ in Danish and Norwegian is like a in care when long, like a in bat when short.

ãe in Portuguese: see III.

ai is usually a diphthong, compounded of the sound of a in far and i in big or pique, thus nearly corresponding in sound to English long i in side. — In Modern Greek, ai is usually like a in care.

aj in Czechoslovak and Danish is similar to i in side; in Hungarian it is similar to oi in boil.

áj in Hungarian is similar to i in side.
am, an in Portuguese: see III.
ão in Portuguese: see III.
au generally has the sound of ou in house. — au in Modern Greek (usually transliterated av in this Dictionary) is pronounced ăf before a voiceless consonant, ăv elsewhere.
auw in Dutch is like ouw (see below).
av in Danish, when not followed by a vowel, is like ou in house.
aw in Welsh is like ou in house.

§ 8. E generally has a sound similar to a in fade, or else to e in there or, when short, to e in met. Cf. § 6. — In Russian, accented e usually has the value of ye in yet or of Ya in Yale; sometimes it is like Yo in York, less often like e in met or a in fade. — Final unaccented e in Portuguese is almost silent. — In Modern Greek, e transliterating epsilon is usually like a in care, e transliterating eta is like e in me.
ę in Polish: see III.
ě in Czech is like ye in yet.
ee, as in German, is generally like a in fade prolonged but not diphthongal. Cf. § 6.
eeuw final and before a consonant in Dutch is ā + ŏŏ; before a vowel, ā + v.
ei is generally a diphthong, combining the sounds of a in fade (or e in met) and e in emit (or i in pin), being similar to ay in day when pronounced very full (cf. § 6). — In Welsh, ei is similar to i in side. — In Dutch, ei is between i in side (its usual Anglicized pronunciation, and its transcription in this Dictionary) and ei in veil. — In Modern Greek, ei is like e in me.
ej in Danish is like i in side; in Hungarian it is similar to ei in veil, or like ĕĭ in one syllable.
em, en in Portuguese: see III.
eu in Dutch (transcribed û in this Dictionary) is similar to ay in day pronounced with the lips well rounded. — eu in Modern Greek (usually transliterated ev in this Dictionary) is pronounced ăf before a voiceless consonant, âv elsewhere. — Otherwise eu is a diphthong composed of a in ale (or e in met) and ŏŏ.
ey is generally like ei, above.

§ 9. I usually sounds like i in marine, or like i in pin. — i final in Romanian is either entirely silent or pronounced very short. — i unaccented before a vowel often sounds like English y in yes. Examples: Spanish Segovia (sā·gō′vyā), Polish Kielce (kyĕl′tsĕ), French Thionville (tyōn′vĕl′), Italian Fiume (fyōō′mā). An unaccented i following c or g and preceding a, o, or u in Italian is silent, serving only to show that the c or g is "soft," as in Ciano (chä′nō), Giotto (jōt′tō). Cf. u unaccented before a vowel.
i in French is like e in me; in Romanian it is somewhat like i in frill.
ia. See i unaccented before a vowel, above.
ie. See i unaccented before a vowel, above. — ie in Dutch is like e in me.
ieuw final and before a consonant in Dutch is ē + ŏŏ; before a vowel, ē + v.
ij in Dutch has the same pronunciation as Dutch ei. See § 8.
im, in in Portuguese: see III.
io, iu. See i unaccented before a vowel, above.

O

§ 10. O, when long, has in general either the sound of English o in old or of o in orb; when short, it is like o in obey, like o in orb pronounced quickly, or like o in odd as pronounced in southern England. Cf. § 6. One should be careful, in attempting a native pronunciation of short o in French, German, and Italian names, to avoid a sound resembling a in far, a value that short o commonly has in American English. — In Russian, o before the accent is similar to u in cut. — o in Norwegian, and in certain situations in Swedish, is pronounced with such extreme lip rounding and with the tongue so high as to sound like oo in cool or hood. — Unaccented o in Portuguese is usually (less often in the Brazilian dialect) like o in who pronounced very lightly.
ó in Polish is like o in who.
ö (cf. eu) occurs in several European languages, and is transcribed û in this Dictionary. When long, it is similar to undiphthongized ay in day pronounced with the lips well rounded; when short, to e in met pronounced with the lips well rounded.
õ in Portuguese: see III.
oe is pronounced like o in so in Low German geographical names; in standard German it is pronounced as described under ö, above. — In Dutch, oe is like oo in food; it is quite short except before r. — In Welsh, oe is somewhat like English oi in oil.
õe in Portuguese: see III.
oi in Modern Greek is like i in marine. — Elsewhere oi is generally like oi in boil. In some Low German names it is like o in so.
öj in Danish is similar to oy in boy.
oo is a long sound similar in quality to o in note but not diphthongized. Cf. § 6. — In Dutch, oo is so pronounced, but in South African Dutch it is a long sound like oo in pool.
ou in Modern Greek is like oo in pool; in Dutch and Norwegian, somewhat like ou in house; in Portuguese, like o in so.
ouw final or before a consonant in Dutch is somewhat like ou in house; before a vowel it is this diphthong + v.
ow in German names is like o in so.

U

§ 11. U in most languages is like English ōō or ŏŏ. Cf. § 6. — In French it is like e in me pronounced with the lips well rounded (a sound transcribed ü in this Dictionary). — Dutch uu, and u when long, have the same sound. Dutch u when short has a sound (transcribed û in this Dictionary) similar to that used by "r-droppers" for ur in English fur. — u in Swedish when long is similar to ou in you, when short to u in cut. — u in Welsh is usually similar to English i in marine or i in pin. — It is sometimes nearly or quite silent in Japanese. — u is otherwise sometimes silent, as in gu, qu (see IV).
u unaccented before a vowel, as in Italian and Spanish, often sounds like English u in quality (that is, like w). Examples: Italian Guastalla (gwäs·täl′lä), Spanish Duero (dwā′rō). Cf. i unaccented before a vowel.
ü in German, Hungarian, and Turkish is like French u, and ue is sometimes used to represent this sound; otherwise ue combines the sound of both u and e. Cf. preceding paragraph.
ui in Dutch is a diphthong with some resemblance to oi in English oil, and is transcribed oi. Strictly, however, it is a sound like eu in French jeune plus a sound like u in French une.
um, un in Portuguese: see III.
uu in Dutch: see first paragraph in this section.

§ 12. Y, as a vowel, is usually like i, that is, like English ē, ĭ. — In Danish, Norwegian, Swedish, and Finnish, it is like French u. — In Flemish, it is like Dutch ei or ij. — In South African Dutch it is a diphthong somewhat like ay in English day. See § 6.

III. NASAL VOWELS AND DIPHTHONGS

§ 13. M and n in French and Portuguese when final, or before any other consonant than another m or n, impart a nasal tone to the preceding vowel or diphthong.
§ 14. The nasal vowels in French are described in detail in the special article on the pronunciation of French, in the Guide to Pron., § 272.
§ 15. In Portuguese, the nasal vowels are indicated by m and n as described above or by the til (~) written over the vowel; ã (cf. ãe, ão, below), am, an, are about like English a in dam made nasal (but am final is like ão). — em and en are about like a in mane nasalized. — im and in are i in ravine nasalized. — om and on are o in bone nasalized.
The nasal diphthongs in Portuguese are: ãe, about like i in fine nasalized (but in Brazil more like ay in day nasalized); ão, like ou in mount nasalized; õe, about like oi in loin nasalized.
§ 16. In Polish, ą is like o in orb nasalized; ę, like e in men nasalized.

IV. CONSONANTS AND CONSONANTAL COMBINATIONS

§ 17. The consonants in the languages of Continental Europe are, for the most part, similar in sound to the same letters in English. The following exceptions may be mentioned: —

§ 18. B at the end of a word in German, Dutch, and the Slavic languages (except Yugoslav) is pronounced like p. — In Modern Greek, b (representing beta) is pronounced, and usually transliterated, v. — In Spanish, b is like English b usually only after a pause, and after m or n (n in this case being pronounced m). Elsewhere it is a sound more like v than b, and transcribed v in these proper names. See Guide to Pron., § 98.
bh in East Indian names is strictly b + h, as in grub hook, but the h may be omitted in English pronunciation.

§ 19. C in Romanian before e and i (but not before î) is pronounced like ch in chill. In the same situation it is like s in sun in Portuguese and in dialects of Spanish other than Castilian, where it is like th in think. — In the Slavic languages and in Hungarian, c has the sound of ts in bats in all positions, except in certain letter combinations; thus Polish Ostrowiec is pronounced ôs·trô′vyĕts. — Before a, o, or u, c usually has the sound of k. — In Gaelic, Irish, and Welsh, c is in all positions like k.
ç in French and Portuguese is like s in sell; in Turkish it is like ch in chop.
ć in Polish and Yugoslav is somewhat like ch in chop.
ch in Catalan is like k when final, like ch in chop elsewhere. — In German, Polish, and some other languages, ch has a fricative sound, somewhat like a strongly uttered h. See Guide to Pron., § 109. — In Portuguese (except in some words from the Greek), ch is like sh in she. — ch in East Indian names is usually like ch in chop; chh is the same followed by h, as in church*house*, but the second h may be omitted in English pronunciation.
cs in Hungarian is like ch in chop.
cz in Polish is like ch in chop; in Hungarian, like ts in bats (but c, with same value, has largely superseded it).

D

§ 20. D is, in general, dental rather than alveolar as in English. See Guide to Pron. § 111, ¶ 1. At the end of a word, in German, Dutch, and the Slavic languages (except Yugoslav), it is pronounced like t. — It has approximately the value of th in this in practically all positions in Modern Greek, usually in Danish after a vowel, and in Spanish in all positions except after a pause and after l or n; in Spanish it is often completely silent when final. — In Danish and Norwegian d is usually silent after l, n, r.
dd in Welsh is like th in that.
dh in many East Indian names is d + h, as in red*head*, but the h may be omitted in English pronunciation.
ds in Hungarian is like j in joy.
dt is like t.
dz preceding i in Polish is like j in joy.

G

§ 21. G in all the European languages is hard before a, o, and u, though in some languages it differs from g in English go in that the tongue is merely raised close to the position for this sound, without actually making contact with the palate. Both these sounds are transcribed g in this Dictionary. — Before front vowels in Modern Greek, Norwegian, and Swedish, g is like y in yard. — Before e, i, and y in French, Portuguese, and Spanish, it is like the j of these languages; before e and i in Romanian it is like g in English gem. — In Dutch, g is usually like German ch. — In Swedish, g after l or r at the end of a syllable is like y in English yes; thus, Göteborg, yû′tĕ·bôr′y′.
gh in Romanian is like gh in the English word ghost, or g in game. — In Irish it is sometimes sounded like a simple h. — In Oriental names it occurs as a strong guttural.
gn in French and Italian combines the sound of n and of y consonant; thus French Mignon is mē′nyōɴ′.
gu in Portuguese before e or i is like g in go.
gy in Hungarian blends the sounds of d and of y consonant; thus, Gyula dyōō′lŏ, Nagy nŏd′y′.

H

§ 22. H in French, Italian, Spanish, and Portuguese is silent (but see the combinations ch, lh, nh). In most of the other languages of Europe it has the same sound as in English (but see th). When final, h is generally silent, but is pronounced in certain Oriental languages.

J

§ 23. J in Italian, German, Polish, Hungarian, Swedish, Norwegian, Danish, and Dutch is pronounced very much like y in yield. — In French, Portuguese, and Romanian it has the sound of zh, or of s in pleasure. — In many East Indian names j is like j in jay, and jh (strictly j + h) may be pronounced in the same way.

K

§ 24. K in Swedish before ä, e, i, ö, y, in accented syllables, is like ch in chop; as, Linköping (lĭn′chû′pĭng). If the syllable is not accented, it is usually like k in king; as, Blekinge (blā′kĭng·ĕ).
kh in Russian names is like ch in German Buch. In Oriental names it is usually fricative. In East Indian names it is like kh in in*k*horn, but may be given as simple k in English pronunciation.

L

§ 25. L, in general, is more distinctly dental than in English (cf. d), and the back of the tongue is not raised, as it often is in pronouncing English l, English l being then "dark" or velar in comparison. See Guide to Pron., § 167.
ł in Polish may be given as English l, though it is "darker" in quality than the dark variety of English l.
lh in Portuguese and ll in Castilian Spanish combine the sound of l and of y consonant; in non-Castilian Spanish, ll is like y in yield; thus, Portuguese ilha is ē′lyä, Spanish milla is mē′lyä or mē′yä.
ll in Welsh (voiceless l) is difficult for a nonnative to imitate. It may be approximated by pronouncing English h, th, or t immediately before l. — In Icelandic, ll is pronounced tl (as in fitly, not as in little).
ly in Hungarian is like y in yield or (after a vowel, where it forms the second half of a diphthong) i in oil.

N

§ 26. N, in general, is more distinctly dental than in English (cf. d). Before k, q, or a hard c (= k) or hard g, n often has the same sound as in English ink (ĭngk), as in Italian.
ñ in Spanish, ń in Polish, ň in Czechoslovak, nh in Portuguese, nj in Yugoslav, and ny in Hungarian and Catalan (like gn in French and Italian) combine the sound of n and of y consonant. Thus Spanish Coruña is kō·rōō′nyä.
ng in German, Dutch, and the Scandinavian languages is nearly always like ng in English singer, not like ng in English finger.
nh in Portuguese: see second paragraph in this section.
nt in Modern Greek is usually like English nd.
ny in Hungarian and Catalan: see second paragraph in this section.

§ 27. In Arabic words in English, both q and k are pronounced like English k. In Arabic, however, the two sounds are distinct, q being pronounced with the tongue back further retracted than for k.
qu in Spanish, usually in French, and without diaeresis before e or i in Portuguese, is pronounced like English k. — qu in Czechoslovak, Danish, Dutch, German, and Norwegian is pronounced kv; in Italian, and before a or o in Portuguese, it is like gu in English guota.
qv in Swedish is pronounced kv.

§ 28. R in most European languages is strongly trilled, either with the tip of the tongue, as in Italian and Spanish, or with the uvula (extremity of the soft palate), as in many parts of Germany and France.

ř in Czech is somewhat like r followed by the sound of z in seizure, or, in some positions, like r followed by sh.

rz in Polish has the sound of z in seizure, or, in some positions, the sound sh.

§ 29. S in several European languages, when between two vowels, has the sound of English z in zeal. — In Hungarian, s is like sh in ship. — In the Portuguese of Portugal, s is pronounced sh before a voiceless consonant, zh (the sound of z in seizure) before a voiced consonant, whether this following consonant is within a word or begins a word that follows without pause; before a pause, s is sh. — In French, final s is sometimes pronounced, but is generally silent.

š in Czechoslovak and Yugoslav is like sh in ship.

ś in Polish is somewhat similar to sh in ship.

ş in Romanian is like sh in ship.

sch in Dutch is sk initially, s medially, finally, and before inflectional endings. — sch in German is like sh in ship.

sj in Danish, Norwegian, Dutch, and Swedish is like sh in ship.

sk is like English sh in ship in Norwegian before e, i, or y, and usually in Swedish before accented ä, e, i, ö, or y.

skj in Norwegian and Swedish is like sh in ship.

ss in Hungarian is like sh in ship prolonged.

stj in Swedish is like sh in ship.

sz in Hungarian is like s in see. — In Polish, sz is like sh in ship.

§ 30. T, in general, is more distinctly dental than in English (cf. d). — In Modern Greek, t after n is pronounced d; as, Atalántē, ä′tä·län′dē.

ţ in Romanian is ts; as, Constanţa, kŏn·stän′tsä.

th in all modern languages of Continental Europe except Modern Greek (in which it has the sound of th in thin) is pronounced like simple t, or like th in Thomas; except: when th are respectively the last and the first members of the elements of a compound in a language in which h standing alone is pronounced, the pronunciation is like th in ho*th*ouse. — In Welsh, th is like th in thin. — In Icelandic, it is like th in thin or th in then, depending on which Icelandic letter it transliterates.

tsch in German, and tch and tsh in transliterations of Slavic, are like ch in chip.

ts in Hungarian is like cs in the same language; that is, like ch in church.

ty in Hungarian blends the sounds of t and of consonant y; it approaches in sound English ch in church.

tz is like ts in bats.

§ 31. V in the Slavic languages (except Yugoslav), German, and Dutch, when occurring at the end of a word or name, is pronounced like English f.

W

§ 32. W in German, and in some other languages, is like English v. It is often uttered with the lips alone, without the aid of the teeth. — In Welsh, w is usually a vowel, pronounced like oo in boo; as, Ebbw, ĕb′o͝o. — In Polish, w final or preceding a voiceless consonant is pronounced like English f; as, Wróblewski, vro͝o·blĕf′skē. — See auw, eeuw, ieuw, ouw.

X

§ 33. X in Mexican names often has the sound of s in see; as, Tlaxcala, tläs·kä′lä. — In Portuguese, x is usually like sh in ship. — In French, it is usually silent when final.

§ 34. Y, as a consonant, at the beginning of a word or syllable and before a vowel, is like English y in yes, but usually pronounced with more friction.

Cf. y, as a vowel, under VOWELS.

Z

§ 35. Z in German is like ts in hits. — In Swedish, it is like s in see. — In Dutch, it is like z in zeal. — In Portuguese, z final before a pause or voiceless consonant is like sh in she, z final before a voiced consonant is like s in pleasure.

ż in Polish is like s in pleasure.

ž in Czechoslovak and Yugoslav is like s in pleasure (when final or before a voiceless consonant in Czechoslovak, like sh in she).

A PRONOUNCING GAZETTEER OF THE WORLD

CONTAINING ABOUT

TWENTY THOUSAND NAMES

The purpose of this Gazetteer section is to give basic information about natural features, regions, countries, and cities and towns of the world. This information includes the spelling and pronunciation of the name, the location, the legal or political status (for example, town, city, urban district, commune, county, state), and statistical data for the more important entries. Population figures are given in round numbers to the nearest hundred. All incorporated urban centers in the United States (1950 Census) and the United Kingdom (1951 Census) having 5000 or more inhabitants are included. Incorporated places in Canada (1951 Census) having more than 3000 inhabitants are included.

The asterisk, ✱, denoting a capital, is the only symbol used. All abbreviations used may be found in the Abbreviations section, pp. 2989–3000.
